5 Feared Dead as Floods Sweep Over 5 States; Gasoline on Water Threatens Fredericksburg

Section of the business district in Cumberland, Md., after shopkeepers spent the night moving their stock to upper floors to escape the rising waters. Sandbags were piled in many doorways.

At Fredericksburg, Va., the Rappahannock River torrents undermined foundations of these gasoline storage tanks, causing them to overturn and cover the waters. Local National Guardsmen were mustered into service.

House Action Halted On Price-Fixing Bill

Surprise White House Order Foreshadows New Program.

Administration Plans, Pending Measures, Conflict.

By Robert C. Albright.

House consideration of price-maintenance legislation was blocked yesterday in a surprise Administration move as the Government neared a cross-roads decision on labor and price-fixing policies.

Action on the Miller-Tydings bill, giving Federal backing to State fair trade practice laws, was postponed indefinitely following "a call from the White House," it was learned.

The measure was scheduled to come up today. The House Judiciary Committee had reported it favorably and the House Rules Committee had granted a rule.

Capitol to Go Slowly.

Sidetracking of the bill was said to foreshadow a comprehensive Administration program for action in the labor and trade practice field, based on the Government's analysis of recent Supreme Court decisions.

The "slow" sign was hung out at the Capitol after a conflict developed between Administration plans and measures being pressed in Congress for State control of wages and hours, child labor and trade practices, backed by Federal enforcement.

Not only the Miller-Tydings bill for price maintenance based on State laws, but several independent measures in the wages and hours and child labor field have sought to carve a course for the Government to follow within confines of Supreme Court rulings.

Cite Court Rulings.

Most of these measures provide for State control, reinforced by Federal enforcement. Held up in the House Judiciary Committee is the Smith bill. This prohibits shipment of goods consigned to States having laws banning working conditions under which the goods were produced.

Sponsors of the "State control" method point to a long line of court rulings, from validation of the Ashurst-Sumners ban on movement of prison-made goods to the recent decision upholding constitutionality of the Wagner labor relations act.

As one member of the Judiciary Committee put it, the Government is at the "cross-roads" on policy and must choose between the State control method or direct Federal action on wages and hours, child labor and fair trade practices.

In a reliable quarter, it was said yesterday the Administration vir-

Hoard of $21,000 In Gold Unearthed By Secret Service

King was reported en route to Washington, and pending his arrival officials refused to name the owner of the gold. They said, however, he was a farmer who had died several years ago. The search had been instituted at the request of his heirs.

Information available last night indicated the money had been buried possibly as early as 1916, and certainly not in contravention of President Roosevelt's 1934 order requiring that gold holdings be turned over to the Federal Government.

Supreme Court Paves Way for Security Test

By Franklyn Waltman.

After relieving Angelo Herndon, colored Communist, of an 18-year sentence imposed under a Georgia antisedition statute, the Supreme Court yesterday decided to review at once a decision of the First Circuit Court of Appeals holding the old-age and unemployment insurance taxes of the New Deal Social Security program unconstitutional.

The court granted a writ of certiorari in the social security case less than a week after Solicitor General Stanley Reed asked for it and within less than two weeks after the circuit court handed down its decision. Arguments in the case will be heard next week, probably Wednesday or Thursday. A decision is assured before the Supreme Court adjourns for its summer recess.

Setting a record for speedy adjudication, this social security test case was brought last November by George P. Davis, a stockholder in the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston to enjoin that enterprise from paying the social security taxes. The Government intervened, with the result that the lower court upheld the validity of the taxes. This decision, however, was

Italo-German Armed Alliance Believed Near

The Situation Abroad.

Great Britain revealed plans for sale of $500,000,000 defense bonds, and warned Spanish insurgents against interference with British shipping.

Smashing victories by Francisco Franco's Spanish rebels driving on Bilbao were claimed. Basque defenders of the city were reported ready to surrender.

Widespread labor trouble, strike rioting and a stock market slump harassed the French government on the eve of the opening of Parliament.

Alliance Predicted.

By the United Press.

Rome, April 26.—Diplomats believed tonight that a military alliance between Europe's dictators—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini—may be in the making.

The groundwork, they said, was laid today at a three-hour conference between the Italian chieftain and Col. Gen. Hermann Goering, Nazi "crown prince."

Such an alliance, pooling the war strength of Italy and Germany, would be one of the most menacing in world history and would be a near-match for the allied might of Soviet Russia and France.

Goering's visit to Mussolini at Venice Palace was one of many "tangible signs" that negotiations between the two totalitarian powers are reaching far beyond the scope of the Italo-German friendships accords of last July 11.

Goering, ostensibly in Italy on a "holiday visit" with Frau Goering, talked with Mussolini and the latter's son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister.

The conversation included the situation in Spain, where both Mussolini and Hitler have committed themselves to a Fascist victory for the rebel leader, Francisco Franco.

A week from today, Constantin von Neurath, Nazi foreign minister, will arrive in Rome for a series of political talks and on May 9 Lieut.

Speakers for U. S. Chamber Sound Strong Humanity Note

Group at Silver Jubilee Session Cites Progress Made by Workers and Urges Promotion of Peace Through Trade.

By William V. Nessly.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States opened its twenty-fifth anniversary meeting yesterday on the themes of better labor relations, defense of business progress in the field of human relations and promotion of world peace through freer movement of trade.

Hundreds of delegates from the Nation's business organizations were on hand for the silver jubilee sessions, which will continue through Thursday. The convention proper opens today, though important preliminaries, including the business session of the National Councillors, were conducted yesterday.

Outstanding developments were:

Colby M. Chester, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, called on business to put human relations and national welfare ahead of all other considerations, labor to "obey the law" and limit its demands to those things for which it will accept full responsibility, and public officials "to be faithful to their trust even at the expense of their political future."

John Foster Dulles, attorney, of New York, suggested opening up vast portions of the world, under the mandate system, to provide outlets for the suppressed energies of some nations that now threaten to lead to war.

U. S. Employes Warned to Stay Out of Market

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt warned one million employes of the United States Government yesterday against speculating in the stock, bond and commodity markets, even as stocks plunged downward heavily on the Nation's markets, with losses of from 1 to 5 points.

His declaration, contained in a letter to Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, will amount in effect to a ban on future speculative activities by Government employes, it was believed last night. There were indications the air-tight rules which govern employes of the Securities and Exchange Commission may be applied to all departments.

Under these rules, all transactions, purchases or sales by employes must be reported to the commission within 48 hours; no securities may be bought on margin; a sharp distinction is applied to the type of securities bought, in that employes are strongly "dissuaded" from buying purely speculative stocks, and may not do so without express permission, which almost never is granted; and all securities bought may not be sold for one year, also without express permission, obtainable only in case of death or similar emergency. Further, stocks may not be bought through relatives or other

President of Brazil To Visit Here, Report

Rio de Janeiro, April 26 (AP).—The newspaper Diario da Norte reported today President Franklin D. Roosevelt had been informed President Getulio Vargas of Brazil would visit him in June, returning the American Executive's visit of last November.

It said President Roosevelt was informed in Washington by the Brizilian Ambassador, Oswaldo Aranha, and reported that President Vargas would travel in a Brazilian warship escorted by a destroyer and five submarines recently bought from Italy.

Dr. McDowell, Retired Bishop, Dies at Home

M. E. Church Head Here for 16 Years Succumbs to Heart Attack.

The Rev. William Fraser McDowell, 79, for 16 years resident Methodist Episcopal Bishop here, died yesterday at his residence, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, of a heart attack.

For the last quarter of a century, Bishop McDowell, who retired from active duty five years ago, worked tirelessly as a leader in the unification movement, whose object is to weld the three largest Methodist churches into one.

Born in Millersburg, Ohio, Bishop McDowell was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan and ordained to the ministry in 1882. He was pastor at Lodi, Oberlin and Tiffin consecutively before his appointment as chancellor at the University of Denver in 1890.

In 1899, the rising young churchman became corresponding secretary for the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Five years later he was elected resident bishop at Chicago, coming to Washington in 1916 to carry on the same task.

Bishop McDowell lectured at all the Methodist Episcopal colleges in this country. He was Cole lecturer at Vanderbilt University, 1910; Lyman Beecher lecturer, Yale,

Troops Guard Flood-Swept Virginia City

Leaking Oil Tanks Bring Menace of Fire at Fredericksburg.

National guardsmen were called out to maintain order and guard property in Fredericksburg last night, where a record flood crest of the Rappahanock River covered a large section of the historic Virginia town, washed out power and light lines and ripped up huge oil and gasoline storage tanks that spilled thousands of gallons of inflammables over swirling waters.

The flood swept down on the city without warning and took its officials by surprise. There was none of the symptoms that usually precede high water. Neither townspeople nor officials were prepared for the deluge, worst of its sort Fredericksburg has known since 1889.

Town's Greatest Emergency.

Hardest hit of all Virginia cities in a State which faced a major flood disaster spread over a wide area and engulfing a score of river-front towns, Fredericksburg lay in total darkness with at least 75 homes invaded by waters from the river George Washington is supposed to have thrown a dollar across.

The Associated Press placed the property loss in this community alone at $500,000. Unofficial estimates were that the loss in the balance of the State would bring the total damage to well over $1,000,000.

As Mayor W. Marshall King called out Battery F of the 111th Field Artillery, Fredericksburg National Guard, to serve the city in its greatest emergency, town officials summed up the situation as follows:

The greatest menace aside from property loss already incurred and that is likely to follow as the waters continue to rise came from the overturning of three large gasoline and oil storage tanks. More than 76,000 gallons of oil and gasoline spread over the turgid waters, giving a threat of fire so terrible that officials cautioned all residents against striking matches.

Water Shortage Feared.

The need of supplying flood-stricken families with food and milk for their babies became an immediate problem. For the time being it was made the responsibility of the Salvation Army and the WPA.

Shelter for the flood refugees was the next problem. The Salvation Army was collecting cots and blankets wherever available.

The threat of a shortage of pure water also was pressing and city health officers were issuing instructions for purifying all water used

Additional Pictures On Pages 3, 4, 5 and 10.

Swollen by prolonged rain, the Potomac and other rivers in the Middle Atlantic area surged over their banks yesterday, causing heavy damage in five States, summarized as follows:

One Virginian was killed and four others missing were believed dead.

The flood crest of the Potomac River was not expected to reach Washington today. Weather Bureau experts were confident it would be less devastating than flood of March, 1936, which inundated virtually all of Potomac Park.

Eight United States highways within a 100-mile area of Washington have been closed.

The situation in affected areas in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania was:

Fredericksburg, Va.—Raging Rappahannock flooding town; Mayor W. Marshall King called out local National Guard. Electric lights went out at 9 p. m. Forty-five houses flooded, and many persons sought shelter with Salvation Army. Three large gasoline tanks overturned, covering the flood waters with fuel. Officials warned against striking matches in the vicinity.

Cumberland Shops Flooded.

Cumberland, Md.—Water from the Potomac inundated three blocks in the downtown section, causing merchants to evacuate their shops.

Pittsburgh—After 30 hours of incessant rain, the city was faced with the worst April flood threat in its history.

Johnstown, Pa.—Flood waters from the Conemaugh inundated buildings in the downtown district, but the rain has stopped and the inhabitants—always conscious of the 1889 disaster—are less worried as flood recedes.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Town is mobilized to fight back flood waters. Trucks laden with sandbags were rushed to banks of the Ohio.

Record Snow Falls in Midwest.

From Chicago came reports of a record April snow fall in the Midwest. Eight-foot snow drifts were reported in Iowa. Snow was regarded as a blessing by farmers, since it brought a much-needed moisture.

The death reported from the flooded area was that of Frank T. Cawthorn, 50, deputy treasurer of Appomattox County, Va. His car careened from water-swept highway into Powhatan Lake.

Missing and believed dead were two young men and two young women of Culpeper, Va. They were Miss Laura Rouse, 24; Miss Betsy Morrison, 23, secretary to the town manager of Culpeper; Joe McCrary, 27, manager of an ice corporation, and James T. Hogan, motor salesman. The

2 Bankers, Philanthropist Buy Van Sweringens' Rail Empire

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—A Pennsylvania philanthropist and two New York investment bankers—all in their forties and heretofore comparatively unknown in powerful financial circles—stepped into the limelight today as purchasers of the controlling block of securities in the vast Van Sweringen railroad empire.

The three are Allan P. Kirby, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., son of one of the founders of the Woolworth chain and in the past chiefly interested in the Kirby family philanthropies, and Robert R. Young and Frank P. Kolbe, of the stock exchange firm of Young, Kolbe & Co.

The purchase was announced by George A. Ball, Muncie, Ind., glass jar manufacturer, on behalf of the George and Francis Ball Foundation—philanthropic institution to which the slight silver-haired Indiana capitalist transferred the controlling stock of Midamerica Corporation, top Van Sweringen holding company, a month ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—A $250,000 damage suit against Floyd Gibbons, radio commentator and foreign correspondent, in which Charles Locke, a writer of radio scripts, charges Gibbons with damaging his reputation by interpolating "improper and misleading" statements into compositions he had prepared for Gibbons' comments on the Ohio January flood, was disclosed today.

Locke claimed that Gibbons had made the insertions "for the purpose of making melodramatic situations and falsely indicating that sensational happenings were taking place at the scene of the broadcast."

The suit charged that on the night of January 28 from Station WLW, Cincinnati, Gibbons had broadcast "that he was reading the script by the light of a railroad lantern, whereas * * * he was reading the script by * * * the usual and customary electric light."

Locke charged also that Gibbons had told the radio audience "that he was actually talking to a diver * * * located 5 miles away under 20 feet of water, whereas in truth and in fact Gibbons was talking to an actor * * * in the studio talking through a lard can."

The court reserved decision.

Labor Rejoices As President Signs Coal Bill

Abolition of Company Unions Also Brings Elation to Workers.

Labor of the country yesterday saw its favored Guffey coal bill signed into law by President Roosevelt and found additional cause for elation in abolition of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's company union.

At the same time President Roosevelt appointed an emergency three-man board to seek a settlement in the threatened strike of two rail unions on Eastern railroads.

Shortly after he signed the Guffey bill, re-establishing Federal control over prices and trade practices in the bituminous coal industry, the President appointed the seven-man commission that will administer the law. On the board he named:

C. E. Smith, West Virginia; Pleas E. Greenleaf, Indiana, and Walter H. Maloney, of Missouri, representing the public.

Carson Named Counsel.

In addition, the President named John Carson, secretary to the late Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, as consumers' counsel. Maloney, Tetlow, Smith and Hosford were members of the old commission set up under the old Guffey act invalidated by the Supreme Court because of its labor provisions. The new act is designed to stabilize the industry and provide sufficiently high prices for producers to maintain satisfactory wages for the 400,000 soft coal miners, led by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

The act provides for a code of fair competition to be promulgated by the commission. In addition, 23 district code boards will be set up, with power to draft minimum price schedules for their areas, subject to the commission's approval.

The mine workers union, in recent negotiations for a new working contract with operators, obtained wage increases estimated at $85,000,000 a year, and other concessions.

Announcement by Carnegie-Illinois Steel that it was withdrawing all support and affiliation from its employe representative plan, known in labor circles as the company union, was made at a special hearing of the National Labor Relations Board. The action put an end to the months-old attack on the plan, before the board, by John L. Lewis' C. I. O. steel workers organizing committee. Much time has been devoted by the board to hearings on the Lewis group's charges.

Second Labor Victory.

The corporation's move was the second such major victory for labor since validation by the Supreme Court of the Wagner labor relations act, which outlaws company unions dominated by employers. The International Harvester Corporation dropped its company union last week. The steel company action followed its earlier granting of recognition to the Lewis union, pay boosts and the 40-hour week.

William Beye, Carnegie-Illinois counsel, notified the labor board yesterday that the corporation agreed:

1. That it would not "interfere with, restrain or coerce its employes in their exercise of their rights to self-organization, to form, join or assist labor organizations to bargain collectively * * *."

2. That it would not "dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or other support to it."

3. That it would not "contribute any support to nor participate in and will withdraw all recognition from and will completely disestablish its relations with the existing plan of employes representation * * *."

At Pittsburgh, Phillip Murray, chairman of the S. W. O. C., told the Associated Press that "because the company unions in other United States Steel subsidiaries are virtually the same, similar action can be expected to dissolve them, in the very near future."

"To Withdraw Support."

At Birmingham, Ala., the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., also a subsidiary of U. S. Steel, announced it will "withdraw from participation in or further recognition of" its employe representative plan, and similar action was taken by the American Steel & Wire Co., a third U. S. Steel property.

The Lewis drive to organize steel workers was expedited to spurt forward as a result of Carnegie-Illinois Steel's action in leaving its 110,000 employes free to join any union they chose. While officers of the employe representation plan some time ago made overtures to William Green seeking aid in efforts to organize in opposition to the Lewis union nothing came of the proposal, and the C. I. O. union is left practically without competition at present in its organizing drive in steel.

President Roosevelt's intervention in the railroad dispute assured a delay of probably 60 days in the threatened strike, if the strike is not prevented all together.

He named I. L. Sharbman, chairman of the economic department of the University of Michigan, and Frank M. Swacker and W. H. Davis, of New York City, to try to reach a settlement in the dispute between ten Eastern rail lines and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes, and the International Longshoremen's Association.

Strike Postponed.

The two unions are engaged in rivalry to represent the rail and shipping employes. The brotherhood had called the strike to begin at noon yesterday, but postponed it upon receipt of word of the President's action.

Railroads involved are the Pennsylvania, Long Island, Baltimore & Ohio, Reading, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Lehigh Valley, New York Central, New York, New Haven & Hartford, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and Erie.

Some 25,000 employes are affected.

The President, in conformity with law, called for a report from the three-man board within 30 days. The law then provides no strike shall be called for 30 days, while the report is being studied and acted upon.

Hailing the new Guffey coal act, John L. Lewis said in a statement that it marks "the beginning of a new era for the bituminous coal industry."

Operators, C. I. O. Confer.

Lewiston, Me., April 26 (AP).—Lewiston-Auburn shoe manufacturers relented late today in their months-long refusal to meet representatives of the Committee for Industrial Organization, sponsors of a strike in 19 factories employing 6,400.

In what Federal Labor Conciliator Thomas J. Williams termed a "preliminary conference," five John L. Lewis aides met with operators' counsel. The C. I. O. demands recognition of its United Shoe Workers' Union, higher pay and shorter hours.

While the conferees tried to reach a basis for settlement negotiations, National Guard sentries were doubled around an Auburn factory near which had been discovered a dynamite stick bomb with a partly burned fuse.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

Supreme Court words and actions have been the best refutation of the charges which President Roosevelt has hurled at that high tribunal as reasons for passage of his judiciary reorganization program. Without making a point of what they were doing, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and a majority of the Court have torpedoed virtually all of the major contentions made by the President.

WALTMAN

The President charged that the Court had closed its mind to the march of progress and insisted on adherence to legal anachronisms—and the Court in the Washington State minimum-wage legislation, overruled its earlier decision in the Adkins minimum-wage case.

The President charged that the Court was out of harmony with modern thought and oblivious to the necessities of a national, industrial era—and the Court upheld the Wagner labor relations act in its application to major manufacturing enterprises.

The President charged that the Supreme Court was unable to handle the burden of cases coming before it and intimated that its docket was congested—and the Court demonstrated that its docket was not only current, but that its expeditious handling of cases was the object of admiration of Mr. Roosevelt's Solicitor General.

These refutations of Presidential contentions occurred in recent weeks—but the court was not finished yet. It undertook yesterday to knock down two more of the Roosevelt arguments. In reversing the conviction of Angelo Herndon, the Negro Communist, the tribunal refuted the President's contention, by implication, that the Supreme Court was a rich man's tribunal and that a poor man could not get justice.

And finally, in granting a writ of certiorari for review of the Boston Circuit Court of Appeals decision holding the social security act taxes unconstitutional, thus paving the way for a hearing of this case next week, the Supreme Court demonstrated the speed with which major policies can be adjudicated—despite Mr. Roosevelt's complaint of long delays.

The social security case which the Supreme Court yesterday agreed to hear stands as a beautiful illustration of the speed with which the Federal courts can move when the New Deal really wishes them to move. It proves again the delays that have occurred were caused by New Deal procrastination for one reason or another.

The suit in the test social security case was brought in a Federal District Court last November. This court upheld the social security taxes as constitutional in January. The First Circuit Court of Appeals on April 14 reversed that decision and declared the taxes unconstitutional. Solicitor General Stanley Reed last Tuesday asked the Supreme Court to review that decision. The Supreme Court yesterday announced its decision to do so. The case will be argued Wednesday or Thursday of next week and a decision will be handed down, in all probability, before June 1.

Contrast this speedy adjudication of the validity of the social security program with the progress of New Deal cases through the Federal courts in the early years of the New Deal. Then the New Dealers were seeking to avoid Supreme Court decisions. They deliberately avoided final adjudication of their legislation until it was absolutely forced on them.

Take the NRA for an example. That act was not passed on by the Supreme Court until late in May, 1935—two years after its passage. Then New Dealers bitterly complained that legislation which had been in force two years should be thus thrown out of the window. But was it the fault of the courts? Those who remember the Belcher case do not think so.

It will be recalled that William E. Belcher, a small Alabama lumber dealer, refused to be bound by the NRA lumber code and openly defied the Government to enforce it against him. In December, 1933, Belcher's recalcitrancy was cited to the Justice Department.

After several months he was indicted for flouting the code. He challenged the constitutionality of the act and the District Court on October 31, 1934, held the NRA unconstitutional. Government attorneys made a great show of taking the case directly to the Supreme Court. Their petition for a review was promptly granted and the case was set down for argument.

On the eve of the hearing of arguments the Government withdrew its appeal after Belcher had gone broke paying lawyer fees to defend the case before the Supreme Court. The only reason given for the Government's action was that the Belcher case was not a good test suit. Apparently the Government was trying to stave off a Supreme Court decision until the NRA could be extended for another year or two—or made permanent.

Meanwhile, there was widespread public criticism of this course of action and the Government later in the spring of 1935 seized on the NRA Schechter poultry case as a test of the law's validity, with the result which is now history.

And there should be mentioned the Government's action in carrying to the Supreme Court appeals in the Louisville slum clearance and the George W. Clarke cases, both involving the constitutionality of the public works section of the NRA act and 1935 emergency relief act—and then suddenly withdrawing the appeals as the cases were about to be argued and leaving the validity of that legislation without adjudication. Other instances indicating the New Deal's desire to avoid final adjudication could be cited. But it is not necessary because it is fairly well established that it has been—not the Supreme Court but—the Roosevelt Administration which has been responsible for delays. At all events, we shall now have a prompt adjudication of the social security taxes.

Although the Supreme Court has been beating down the President's contentions, one by one, New Dealers could find consolation in the fact that the tribunal is doing what Mr. Roosevelt wants it to do. But they don't. From the expressions of chagrin and sour notes in New Deal circles recently every time the court upholds a Roosevelt enactment, one is led to suppose that instead of getting New Deal measures upheld, the wreaking of vengeance on the court is the real objective of the court reorganization program.

Dick Merrill Will Fly Broker to Coronation

New York, April 26 (AP).—Henry Tindell (Dick) Merrill, the airline pilot who took a bus-man's holiday last summer to hop the Atlantic, round trip, with Harry Richman, said tonight he planned to fly a passenger to London for the coronation, returning with photographs and movie films of the ceremonies.

His passenger, an unidentified Wall Street broker, will pay $10,000 for his aerial jaunt to London.

Taxes Enriched Harlan Sheriff, La Follette Says

Coal Operators Accused of Permitting Officer to Build Fortune.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, of the Civil Liberties Committee, accused a group of Kentucky coal operators yesterday of permitting Sheriff Theodore Middleton, of Harlan County, to "build up his personal fortune by speculating with State and county tax money."

Although the operators were Middleton's official bondsmen and bankers, he asserted they "closed their eyes" to "financial irregularities."

Witnesses before the committee have testified repeatedly the coal operators suppressed all labor unions for the last 14 years, largely through use of special deputy sheriffs commissioned by Middleton and his predecessors.

La Follette made his charges a few minutes after the chubby, red-faced sheriff had refused to answer question about his financial affairs, on grounds he might "tend to incriminate myself" in connection with a possible income tax prosecution."

Tax Officials Listen In.

Investigators said income tax officials were in the velvet-draped hearing room while Middleton was on the stand.

Before he claimed constitutional immunity from further questioning, the sheriff readily conceded he had acquired $102,728 worth of real estate and securities since he took office in 1934, although his official salary never amounted to more than $4,460 a year.

"The committee is somewhat puzzled about how you found the office of sheriff so lucrative," La Follette remarked.

"I'm just as puzzled as you are," Middleton replied.

He explained he "made a little bit of money on the side" through trading on the stock market and other business enterprises.

Middleton refused to comment "at this time" on the testimony of his former chief deputy, Henry Lewis, that the sheriff had "taken back" $75 of the deputy's $200 salary each month.

La Follette then confronted him with bank records and his own reports to the Harlan County Fiscal Court. The Senator said these documents indicated Middleton had transferred $60,156 from official accounts to his personal account between 1934 and 1937.

Admits Transfer.

The Senator observed Middleton's commissions on tax collections during the period could not have exceeded $25,783. Middleton again agreed, and added, "I don't know what happened to the rest of the $60,000." At another point, however, he said he paid in to the public treasury all the public money he collected.

La Follette read a series of bank entries which he said indicated Middeton had transferred money from tax collection accounts to pay personal notes and debts to his stock broker. Middleton did not challenge any of the Senator's statements. He testified the president of the Bank of Harlan, where both personal and official funds were deposited, was W. W. Lewis, county treasurer, coal operator, and one-time partner of the sheriff in a liquor store, who testified later he had "no objection" to county officials "paying personal loans out of public funds."

Sugar Price Pact Drawn; Growers To Net $35,000,000

London, April 26 (AP).—A world sugar agreement calculated to net producers an additional $35,000,000 to $40,000,000 annually through stabilized prices was being drafted tonight by delegates to the international conference.

Informed sources said the agreement is expected to be signed this week.

Half of the increase will accrue to American growers, with $10,000,000 going to Cuba, $4,000,000 to the Dominican Republic, $3,500,000 to Peru and $500,0000 tao Haiti.

An authoritative conservative estimate based the figures on a price advance of half a cent per pound.

'Liberal Mood' Of Court Scored By Cummings

Justices Adopt 'Garment of Repentance,' He Says in Address.

Attorney General Homer Cummings asserted last night that the country does not want "a reactionary Supreme Court temporarily in a liberal mood."

Driving on in the Administration's fight for enactment of the President's court reorganization plan, the Attorney General, in a national radio broadcast, said:

"Pitifully few of those who testified, in the Senate hearings, approved in whole-hearted fashion the course the Supreme Court has pursued.

"And now, as if to make the conclusion unanimous, the Supreme Court, albeit by a narrow margin, has voted itself a 'winter garment of repentance' and has upset crucial decisions of long standings."

On the other side, Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, declared President Roosevelt is trying to legislate democracy out of existence.

Speaking by radio, he said:

"No dictator ever ran on a platform calling for a dictatorship, and it is no sufficient answer to deny that a dictatorship is the aim of a group in control."

If enacted, Bridges declared, the President's bills for six new Supreme Court justices and for reorganization of administrative agencies would set up "an all-powerful executive government."

As the Senate Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, prepared for opening of executive sessions on the court bill today, Representative John Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, "seriously" proposed in the House that the Supreme Court "move back into the old and hallowed chamber in the Capitol Building."

Rankin scored the new Supreme Court Building bitterly, and then said:

"It was a horrible mistake to move the court, and it has created an unconscious breach between the legislative and judicial branches which will widen as the years go on."

He suggested that the new Supreme Court edifice be used as the Jefferson Memorial, to save money.

He has previously attacked the court building as "the ne plus ultra of inconvenience," and with Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, agreed that it "has the worst acoustics in Washington, is badly lighted," and "all in all, gaudy in the extreme."

House's Study Of Price-Fixing Is Postponed

Move Foreshadows New Action in Labor, Trade Practice Field.

tually has completed its analysis of the far-reaching Wagner labor decision. It practically has formulated a three-pronged Federal program in the field of wages and hours, child labor and fair-trade practices. Some features of the Miller-Tydings bill and other Congressional measures dealing with the subject are said to conflict with that program.

Decision Is Imminent.

A decision is imminent on whether to submit the program in three separate measures, or in one all-embracing bill, it was said.

Meantime, Administration right-of-way has been given to the Ellenbogen bill, seeking to set up a "little NRA" in the textile industry by Federal regulation of wages and hours, child labor and trade practices.

Late yesterday Chairman William P. Connery of the House Labor Committee received White House approval of his plans to go ahead with sub-committee hearings on the bill on Monday, May 3.

Several weeks ago the President had given Connery a cautious "go-ahead" signal, but, pending study of the Wagner labor decision, hearings have been held in abeyance.

The Ellenbogen "textile" measure is more stringent than the recently revised Guffey coal act, but like the coal bill its application is confined to a single large industry. Advocates insist the textie industry, like coal mining, is susceptible to independent treatment.

He estimated the cost of administering the proposed textile law at $350,000 a year.

Representative Connery, who expects a Presidential message on the general question of wages and hours, child labor and trade practices, said his labor committee will take no general labor action until the President speaks, even if it is delayed until next session.

He said the Administration "wants the court issue settled first."

The Miller-Tydings bill seeks to eliminate resale price-cutting in branded or trade-marked goods. It would amend the Sherman antitrust act to legalize interstate contracts for resale of goods within those States having fair trade acts—some 38 in number.

Weapon of Distributors.

Proponents of the bill argue price cutting is a weapon of large distributors to crush small businessmen. Opponents contend prce-mantenance legislation tends unduly to enhance the price of goods to the consumer. This latter argument was used in leadership quarters yesterday as one of the reasons the Miller-Tydings measure was postponed, after a rule was granted. Fears were expressed that the upward price trend might be encouraged by the measure.

Representative John E. Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, said these are questions for the State to determine.

"It is the legislature's responsibility to fix the public policy of the State," Miller said in his report. "This legislation merely seeks to help effectuate a public policy so fixed in a State. It has no application to any State which does not see fit to enact a fair trade act."

Yesterday's change of House legislative schedule was the third that has been influenced by the Administration this session. The Sumners bill, expediting Justice Department intervention in lower court constitutional tests, was postponed after a last-minute "call from downtown." The Jones farm tenancy bill also was "held in abeyance" pending an Administration reappraisal of the legislation, although leaders had set a day for its consideration.

It was learned yesterday the Senate resolution condemning "sit-down strikes" along with "unfair" industrial practices may never be called up in the House. It has been reported favorably by the House Labor Committee.

British Columbia Gets Yukon Area

Victoria, British Columbia, April 26 (Conodian Press).—Premier T. D. Pattullo announced today agreement had been reached with the dominion government for the acquisition of the Yukon Territory by British Columbia.

The Yukon Territory, covering an area of 207,076 square miles, lies north of the Province of British Columbia and flanks Alaska. Its population in 1931 was 4,230. As a territory, its administration was carried on by the dominion government, with a local government composed of a chief executive and an elective council. As a part of a province, its administration will be carried on by the provincial government.

'Prettiest Legs' Severed.

Hackensack, N. J., April 26 (U.P.).—Jennie Simpson, 18, who won a trophy for the "most beautiful legs" in a beauty contest here, lost her balance today as she attempted to board a moving train and fell between the cars. The wheels severed both legs.

5 Feared Dead as Floods Hit 5 States; Fuel Leak Threatens Fredericksburg

Waters Close 8 U.S. Highways In Capital Metropolitan Area

automobile believed to be the one in which they were riding was seen to topple into the flooded Robinson River, 9 miles from Orange. Two volunteer fire companies awaited receding of the waters to make a search for bodies.

Red Cross Prepares.

The American Red Cross ordered more than 50 chapters in the Potomac and James river basins to be prepared to meet a flood emergency. It was announced that 1,000 cots and blankets were being rushed to Wheeling, W. Va., to care for families that may be forced to evacuate their homes for the third time in little over a year.

C. Marshall Finnan, director of parks here, said yesterday he was prepared to throw up a dike of sandbags near the Munitions Building if the crest of the Potomac flood appears ominous today.

Hains Point was flooded at high tide yesterday, and the Speedway was closed.

Both Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station were under water. Planes were moved from some of the hangars.

Harbor police were kept busy throughout the day, answering calls for help on the Potomac. Occupants of a small houseboat were rescued when their craft struck a submerged piling.

Damage throughout the parks and river-front areas, however, was reported slight.

Four inches of rain have fallen on the Capital in the last 24 hours, according to Weather Bureau figures. The forecast for today is cloudy with occasional showers.

Yesterday's high-water mark was reached at 8:30. An easterly wind combined with high tide to lift the river level within 0.7 of a foot of flood stage at Wisconsin avenue. Flood stage at this point is 8 feet above mean low level.

The Defense highway to Annapolis was closed at Peace Cross, where several feet of water forced motorists to detour by way of Rhode Island avenue.

Bladensburg, East Riverdale and Brentwood, Md., reported highest water in the Washington area. More than 100 families were driven from their homes and rescued by volunteer firemen. It was estimated that 300 acres were under water.

First-aid stations were established at fire engine houses in the vicinity.

Flood waters from Paint Branch Creek inundated the University of Maryland's "nature trail" and arboretum here. Prof. Arthur S. Thurston, head of the University horticultural department, said he could not estimate the amount of damage done to valuable trees and flowers in the two show spots.

A sewer collapsed at 727 Fern place northwest as a rain swollen swamp over-taxed community drainage system. A 10-foot hole apearedp in the back yard of B. B. Price and other craters were formed as soil was washed away.

Traffic Snarls.

Repeated traffic snarls were reported to police as motorists encountered closed streets and detour signs.

Washington Airport was partially inundated earlier in the day, but flying schedules were resumed shortly before sundown.

District public schools—except high and junior high—were dismissed at noon. The order was issued by Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools.

That part of Rock Creek Park in Maryland was a river last night as the swollen waters of Rock Creek surged over the valley. Most of the park development was under water last night, with the exception of the clubhouse at Meadowbrook.

Connecticut Avenue Covered.

Rock Creek had backed over Connecticut avenue north of North Chevy Chase to a depth of 6 inches and Maryland State Roads Commission employes had been posted last night to slow traffic through the water. Single files of automobiles only were permitted to pass.

Flashboards atop the Burnt Mills filtration plant were holding back 20,000,000 gallons of water from already inundated Bladensburg. Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission employes at the filtration plant said they believed the gates would hold, but that if they gave they would tilt slowly and not permit the water to pour out at once.

The horse show grounds at Meadowbrook Saddle Club on East-West highway at Beech drive were inundated and most of the recreation centers in the park were under water. Chief Engineer Irving C. Root of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said last night that he did not believe the flood would hurt the park system much except for debris.

Seneca Creek, near Darnestown, was out of banks and across the road but not enough to halt traffic. Water was creeping up on summer cottages along Seneca Creek near the Potomac and the Potomac, and the old canal were close to union last night at Glen Echo. Cottage owners were moving furniture out of their cottages last night as the water lapped at the front steps.

East avenue, Stanford street and Nottingham drive in Bethesda had been closed to traffic last night. Water was several feet deep in the streets and flooding cellars.

More than 200 Bethesda Volunteer Firemen, on orders from the Fire Board, were "sitting down" in their various fire stations last night.

Hundreds of requests from citizens that their cellars be pumped empty of flood waters were refused on the ground that "nails, grit and sand often impair the fire engines." The volunteers declared they would "only fight fires."

A number of cellars in North Takoma Park were flooded yesterday and Maj. W. F. Fischer, superintendent of public works of Takoma Park, Md., kept his men working all day in the vicinity of the Bliss Electric School where streets were flooded.

Trains Are Derailed.

Crack Baltimore & Ohio trains from the West were far behind schedule yesterday and last night due to the flood conditions. At midnight station officials were still awaiting the William Penn flyer, from Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, which should have arrived in Washington at 7:40 a. m. The early morning express from Chicago and Pittsburgh was already over 15 hours late, and the Shenandoah, from Chicago and Detroit, almost five hours late.

Trains from the South also were delayed.

The Chesapeake & Ohio and the Pennsylvania lines, as well as the Baltimore & Ohio, reported interrupted schedules.

'Hatchet' Wins Honors In Newspaper Contest

The George Washington University Hatchet won All-American superior honors for the fourth successive year, in the annual contest held by the National Scholastic Press Association, it was announced last night.

Crowd Watches Rappahannock Flood Homes

Many of those in the picture were forced from their homes at Falmouth, Va., by the raging waters as the river rose to a greater high than at any time since 1889. Salvaging what they could, the crowd watched as the two main bridges leading to Fredericksburg were threatened.

Snows Cripple Travel, Phones In Middle West

Eight-Inch Drifts Bring Moisture to Dry Belt, But Delay Planting.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 26.—One of the worst April snowstorms in recent years proved both a boon and a bane to the Midwest today.

The snowfall, drifted up to 8 feet in northwestern Iowa, provided welcome moisture for important agricultural areas in the 1936 drought belt, but delayed spring planting, hampered traffic and crippled communication in several States.

The Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. reported 1,000 wires were broken and 100 poles were toppled in Iowa's week-end storm. High winds damaged barns and killed some livestock. Motorists were stranded at Primghar.

Snow plow crews and power linemen labored to restore normalcy to western Minnesota. More than 100 Crookston High School students, snowbound Sunday at Thief River Falls, returned to their homes.

Roads were blocked and communication disrupted in the northeastern section of Nebraska.

Rain fell in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, eastern Minnesota and Wisconsin. Precipitation measured 1.58 inches at Sioux City, Iowa, 2.25 at Yankton, S. Dak., and 2.78 in the vicinity of Bemidji, Minn.

Chilly weather formed the rule east of the Rockies with freezing temperatures or frost forecast for the Western prairie land.

Cut Queues or Jail, Is Order to Manchus

Nanking, China, April 26 (AP).—The government snipped the last vestage of ancient Manchu authority today, ordering all Manchus to cut off their queques by June 30 or go to jail.

For 300 years, Manchu emperors required their subjects to wear "pigtails" as a mark of subservience. After the revolution of 1911, all but the numerically dwindling Manchus cut off the plaits.

6,000 Flee Flood At London, Ont., As Thames Rages

London, Ontario, April 26 (Canadian Press).—The worst floods this western Ontario city has experienced in 40 years tonight compelled 6,000 persons to evacuate their homes in several sections of London.

Several thousand other residents in London West, London South and districts north and east waited for boats to take them from their homes. City authorities appealed for more boats for rescue work.

The Thames River, source of the flood waters, was rising at the rate of 6 inches an hour, fed by rain-swollen tributaries. At 9 p. m. (E. S. T.) it was estimated to be 30 feet above normal.

Rivers Session Advised Flood Funds Lacking

Bankhead Says Little Money Available This Year for Control Program.

No money for flood control work will be forthcoming from Congress this year in any substantial amounts, Speaker William B. Bankhead told the National Rivers and Harbors Congress yesterday at the Mayflower.

As reports from Pittsburgh, the Potomac basin and other flood areas swept into the convention yesterday, alarming many of the 300 delegates, Speaker Bankhead stated that Congress this year and probably next would have to pass by flood appropriations because of lack of funds.

It was regarded by delegates as most discouraging, since the group—composed of engineers, statesmen, transportation heads and scientists—was ready with extensive plans for flood control works which it hoped to have stamped with Congressional approval, especially in view of last winter's flood disasters.

Typical was the speech of State Senator William B. Rodgers, of Pittsburgh, president of the United States Flood Control Association, who demanded immediate action from Congress and, "no more time wasted in studies."

President Sends Greetings.

Saying that 30 years was enough for study, Rodgers declared his State was "all ready to go on a giant flood program. We have authorized $5,000,000 in the State Legislature," he said, "and will raise $50,000,000 more, through a bond issue, if Congress will only give us action, matching our expenditures dollar-for-dollar."

President Roosevelt sent his greetings and said:

"The flood catastrophe in the Ohio River Valley this year has emphasized again the necessity for the planned control of our national waterways, not only to protect our communities from the hazards of floodwaters but also to insure the proper utilization of our water resources for the benefit of the public at large. Such a program merits most thoughtful and constructive consideration."

Flood control projects surveyed by the Army engineers, approved by Congress and the President, and estimated to cost $310,000,000, were included in the omnibus flood control act passed at the last session. However, this was an authorization measure only, and no money has been appropriated to carry it out.

Agreed on Program.

"Adequate appropriations should be made immediately available for the initiation of these projects," the group urged, and added they "should be supplemented at the earliest possible date by more projects which are engineeringly sound and economically justifiable."

Considerable difference of opinion as to the best methods of flood control which marked previous gatherings of the Congress were noticeably absent yesterday, as various proponents of different schemes pleaded for co-operation.

H. H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture, said:

"Three years ago I was considered a foreigner to the aims and purposes of this congress. I feel today we meet on common ground to discuss a common problem.

"At the time of the Susquehanna River floods in 1936 measurements showed 88 per cent of the rainfall ran off potato fields, whereas only one-half of 1 per cent ran off a nearby wooded area of equal size having a slope twice as steep."

Weather Angle Discussed.

Mr. Bennett then pointed out the close relationship between flood control, river sedimentation and soil conservation, citing a score of similar detailed examples of his studies.

E. E. Munns, of the Forest Service, admitted that reforestation is far from the answer to flood control, taking time to compliment the engineers in dyking the Ohio near Cairo, but insisting that reforestation should become an integral part of any flood program, for reasons similar to those advanced by Bennett.

Weather Angle Discussed.

W. R. Gregg, chief of the Weather Bureau, told of experiments in forecasting which may lead to long-range weather predictions which would be of great value to farmers.

Other speakers yesterday were Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri, who presided at a luncheon; Maj. Gen. Edward Markham, who spoke on "The Conservation and Utilization of Our Water Resources;" Representative John H. Mansfield, Secretary of War Harry Woodring, who spoke on "Great Floods," and numerous others. Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general, will open today's session with a talk on "Public Health Aspects of Stream Pollution."

Zionists Affirm Rights.

Jerusalem, April 26 (AP).—The Zionist general council today unanimously passed a resolution recording its firm refusal to accept any scheme for Palestine curtailing Jewish rights as expressed in Britain's mandate and the Balfour declaration.

Leaking Tanks Of Oil Bring Hazard of Fire

Loss Set at $500,000; Charlottesville Now Is Threatened.

But the greatest threat, a danger the townspeople feared even more than the muddy flood waters, were the three gasoline tanks in the heart of the flood area.

One of the tanks, containing 250,000 gallons of gasoline, broke loose early last night and swept downstream, crashing against a one-masted boat moored to the bank.

Just a short time before a smaller tank containing about 60,000 gallons was lifted up by the rising waters and made to spin like a silver cork on the top of the submerged story-and-a-half building of the Gulf Refining Co.

40-Foot Stage Reached.

The smell of gasoline was heavy in the rain-laden air as the tanks pounded around in the flood debris. City officials admitted the possibility of the tanks exploding and bringing the city its feared fire regardless of the caution.

A flood stage of 40 feet was reached before last midnight and the relentless Rappahannock was still rising.

The heaviest loss was to the Standard, Colonial and Gulf Oil companies on the river front. The damage was put at $150,000 to these alone. The balance of the loss was to river front business properties and inundated homes.

The Mary Washington Hospital is close to the swirling flood, but these were thought to be out of danger, though patients in them were in a panic.

Many Washingtonians, touring north, left their automobiles in Fredericksburg garages and proceeded to the Capital by train.

"When we reached Fredericksburg about dusk the water was rising rapidly and the rain was dreary," said Harry Goldsmith, of 1320 Twenty-first street northwest.

"The police handled us good-naturedly, but told us we could not get through. I saw several houses where the water had crept up to the second story after we had entered the city coming by way of the battlefield.

"Fredericksburg seemed to accept the crisis calmly. The water already was beginning to rise around Main street.

"The hotels were crowded, and the train we came back on was crowded, too. In a restaurant a waitress told me it was the worst flood she had ever seen."

From two to six feet of water, green and mucky, flowed through the residential district, and on Main street the lower floors of shops were inundated.

A small colored school, having four or five rooms, was swept from the banks and carried away down the Rappahannock.

By midnight the water had isolated the deserted house of Jett Lauck, an adviser to John L. Lewis, the labor tycoon.

In the rest of the State floods and gales lashed at riverfront property and brought a loss certain to exceed a half million dollars.

Sections of highways were torn out, railroad bridges washed out, and hundreds were made homeless.

Four Believed Dead.

Volunteer firemen grappled in the muddy waters of the Robinson River in Madison County for an automobile which they believed to contain the bodies of four young Culpeper people, reported to have plunged from a bridge at Locust Dale into a 30-foot torrent.

Hubert Ritenour, 56-year-old employe of the Tomsbrook Lime Co., Shenandoah County, dropped dead while helping to move farming equipment to safety from flood waters on the farm of Floyd Hollar, west of Tomsbrook.

Both the Falmouth bridge on Route 1 and the city bridge on Route 3 were closed to traffic as the flood waters continued to mount.

Streets of Falmouth were submerged to a depth of several feet and a number of homes and business establishments were flooded.

Four persons, including a woman and a child, were carried down the Rappahannock on a barge loaded with 8,000 railroad ties which was swept from its moorings. The lives of the four, however, were not believed in immediate danger.

Damage unofficially was estimated at approximately $20,000 at Colonial Beach, where a southeast gale tossed tons of water over the bank bulkhead, tearing out a driveway, a concrete promenade and a 1,000-foot stretch of the bulkhead itself.

The Rivanna River began to slip back into its banks at Charlottesville last night after the heaviest rainfall of record paralyzed highway transportation and tied up traffic over the main lines of the Southern and Chesapeake & Ohio railroads.

Seven northbound and six southbound trains spent the night with their load of passengers between Charlottesville and Orange while workmen struggled to repair washouts.

The Southern went back into service yesterday morning and trains of both lines crawled to their destinations. Speeds were reduced to 10 miles an hour over the Southern's tracks. The George Washington, crack Chesapeake & Ohio train, was delayed 12 hours.

A train from Washington on the Chesapeake & Ohio ramed a mud slide coming up Rapidan Hill, near Ohange, but escaped derailment. The locomotive was coated with 3 inches of mud when it pulled into Charlottesville.

In 48 hours 7.60 inches of rail fell in Charlottesville, an all-time record.

Farms Turned Into Lakes.

Hundreds of rural families were driven from their homes near Woodstock when three days of rains pushed the Shenandoah past flood stage to a crest of 27 feet. Lowland farms were turned into huge lakes. Auto traffic was at a standstill.

At Cobham, Va., 1,200 railroad excursionists were marooned by a washout. The dining car department of the Chesapeake & Ohio came to their aid with truck loads of food sent from Strathmore, 40 miles away.

Railroad officials hoped to get the vacationers back to their homes in Huntington, W. Va., and points West today.

Swollen creeks caused by the rains during the last 24 hours cut off traffic in some sections near Leesburg. Water has risen several feet over the approach to the Goose Creek bridge on Route 15, between Leesburg and Middleburg.

It was at this approach that Stanley Wilson, of Middleburg, abandoned his car and walked to safety while the raging waters washed his car over an embankment and overturned it in 4 feet of water.

Some Schools Closed.

Little River is also several feet out of bounds on the same road, stopping traffic between these two points. Swollen streams on the Wheatland-Lovettsville road also have isolated these points. A number of school buses could not run today and schools were closed early to allow the children to reach home before high waters endangered them. The water has reached the Goose Creek bridge on the Washington-Leesburg pike.

At Raccoon Ford, near Culpeper, and at Remington, Va., on the main highway, bridges were washed out last night. A grain mill near Culpeper was lifted from its foundations and tossed downstream.

Gales Endanger Coastal Shipping

New York, April 26 (AP).—Gales swept the Atlantic seaboard today from Manhattan to the Virginia Capes, sinking two small vessels without los of life and doing scattered damage in coastal cities.

The Nova Scotia fishing steamer Lake Ormas wirelesed it had rescued all hands of the schooner Charles and Verna, which sank 25 miles off the Virginia Capes, and the tug Brandywine sank near Barren Island Light in Chesapeake Bay, its eight men reaching safety in a lifeboat.

Weather observers reported the wind reached a velocity of 60 miles an hour about the upper floors of skyscrapers.

Fear was felt for a time concerning the Chesapeake Line's City of Richmond, but she arrived finally, hours late, at Old Point, near Norfolk, on a run from Baltimore.

Maryland Areas Are Battered By Winds and Flooded Rivers

By the Associated Press.

All sections of Maryland suffered yesterday from high winds, high water, rain or flood. No loss of life or serious injury was reported, however.

In Baltimore an east wind blew the water back into the harbor. When the tide rose it flooded streets in the neighborhood of the waterfront and spoiled provisions stacked in warehouses. A number of persons in the suburbs of the city were rescued from flooded homes or else fled them as the water rose.

On the Eastern Shore, Ocean City bore the brunt of the weather's attack. Seas broke across the island on which the resort is located and the waves damaged fish pounds. One waterman said the damage would amount to $30,000.

The water rose in Cumberland to the doorways of the stores on the main business street, but fell during the day when the rain, which had poured down for three days, thinned to a drizzle. Flooded streets were still roped off, however, and the city was alert.

The road between Cumberland and the rest of the State was blocked by water in three places and both railroads into the city were blocked by water and washouts.

In Dorchester County, in the Cambridge vicinity, all points on the water reported unusually high tides and heavy rain. Some roads were covered with from 18 inches to 2 feet of water.

Federalsburg, which suffered a flood in 1935, was not threatened, but the rain there continued. The Weather Bureau promised additional rain during the night for all parts of the State, and said that the danger in the Potomac River Valley might not be passed for 24 hours.

Large portions of Crisfield, on the lower Eastern Shore, were under water. Four inches of flood stood in Jersey, Brooklyn and Hoptown, sections of the town. Seven streets near the waterfront were wholly or partially under water.

Centers of evacuation were at St. Georges Island and at Great Mills, both in St. Marys County. However, storm damage was reported in all of the peninsula between the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay.

At Great Mills water was standing in the street and many residents moved their household effects to higher ground. J. Bradley, a farmer living near Millstone, was marooned in his house on a hill. Two creeks which flow into the Patuxent River at this point rose and cut his farm off from the mainland.

Many of the 400 residents of St. George's Island, south of here, moved off the island as the rising waters threatened to cover the bridge which connects it to the mainland. About 30 families moved to a hill on the island Sunday night, after a high tide drove the water toward their homes. For several hours yesterday the road leading from the island was busy with trucks and wagons moving household goods.

At North Beach and Chesapeake Beach high winds across the bay drove breakers onto the beach and tore out long lengths of bulkheading erected to protect the beach from erosion. North Beach was isolated when water covered a low spot in the road between North and Chesapeake Beach. Two State roads trucks stationed on each side of the flooded sections hauled cars through the water with long ropes. Water was reported in low places in North Beach itself.

At Governors Run the highest tide since the disastrous storm of 1933 was reported. Cottages, boats and fish nets were damaged at Kenwood Beach, nearby, and men were stationed to try to guard the cottages from further harm.

High water entered some of the stores at Solomons and double moorings were placed on boats. Water was in the streets of the community at Brooms Island and residents were ready to move if it came higher.

Persons living on the water front at Piney Point evacuated their homes, and the water entered the boat-building shop of Walter Cheseldine at River Springs. A bridge over the St. Marys River between Great Mills and Dreyden was moved off its foundations by the current.

The force of the wind kept the Chesapeake Bay ferries at their docks in Annapolis. The waves broke over the seawall at the Naval Academy and the parade ground was under several inches of salt water, which will kill the grass. The Academy, remembering the 1933 storm, which sank all the small boats there, arranged double mooring for its craft.

U. S. Attache Aboard Lost Venezuela Plane

By the Associated Press.

The State Department learned yesterday that Frederic D. Grab, of Chicago, American commercial attache at Caracas, was a passenger on a Venezuelan government plane which has been missing since last Friday.

The plane disappeared en route to the Brazilian border from Ciudad, Bolivar. It carried a crew of three besides Grab and William Armstrong Perry, an American newspaperman.

Storm Tosses Congress Ship; 2 Women Hurt

Senators, Representatives and Wives, on Junket, Are Shaken Up.

By James McConaughy.

Nearly a hundred Congressmen and Senators, members of a two-day juncket by steamship to Old Point Comfort, Va., were slowly regaining their Congressional equilibrium yesterday after being buffeted for four hours Sunday night in one of Chesapeake Bay's worst storms in the last two decades.

From 7:40 p. m., when the steamer District of Columbia left Old Point Comfort, until it entered the Potomac River about midnight, the party of 187 Congressmen and their families were tossed and pitched by 23-foot waves. At times, according to Capt. Edward H. Eaton, jr., the wind blew from 60 to 65 miles an hour.

During the worst of the storm, the first hour after leaving Old Point Comfort, Representatives and Senators were thrown from one side of the ship to the other. Chairs went skittling across the floors of the main cabin, and heavy tables were overturned by the violent pitching of the steamer.

Two Slightly Hurt.

Minor injuries were suffered by two of the party—Mrs. Andrew J. May, wife of the Representative from Kentucky, who suffered a sprained wrist and a bruised chest when a table overturned on her in the dining room, and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, wife of the Minnesota Senator, who was bruised slightly when she was thrown against a stairway landing.

Capt. Eaton described the storm as one of the worst he had seen in 17 years of sailing Chesapeake Bay. He said he had never seen such severe continued high seas on a similar trip.

The height of the storm struck the ship about 8:10 p. m., half an hour after sailing. Eighty-five persons, seated in the dining room, postponed al throughts of eating as china and silverware slid across the floor, three tables overturned and a dozen persons were thrown violently to the floor.

About half the party retired immediately; stewardesses said there were about 20 cases of seasickness. By 11 o'clock, however, only a handful of Congressmen remained in the saloons, most of them lamenting the heavy rain, which had drenched many of the cabins.

Garner Good Sailor.

Vice President Garner proved to be one of the best sailors. Leaving the main dining room two minutes before the rain of tables, chairs and china started, he spent the next two hours smoking a long, black cigar and talking confidentially with a handful of Congressmen. He retired promptly at 9:50 p. m.

Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, barely escaped serious injury. Seated beside Senator Joseph T. Robinson, he was suddenly thrown 15 feet across the floor, crashing into a stairway railing. A minute later another violent pitch of the boat threw him forward on his head and shoulders.

Capt. Eaton said the boat was never in danger, despite the heavy seas and driving wind. The steamer left Old Point Comfort 45 minutes late, but docked promptly at 7:30 a. m., according to schedule. Although 217 were in the party that left Friday night, about a dozen couples returned by train, while several remained for additional sightseeing on the Virginia Peninsula.

President Kept Busy On Fishing Trip Eve

On the eve of his departure for a fishing trip off the Texas Coast, President Roosevelt yesterday put in one of his busiest days in weeks. Things he did included:

Signed Guffey coal act and appointed seven-man board to administer it.

Sent letter to Civil Service Commission insisting that Government officials and employes shall not speculate on stock, bond or commodity exchanges.

Appointed three-man emergency board to seek a settlement of the threatened Eastern railroad strike.

Withdrew nomination of Murray W. Latimer, Democrat, to Social Security Board in view of the law's provision that only two members can be of same party.

Conferred with four Cabinet officers, the internal revenue commissioner, acting director of the budget, the Mexican Ambassador, two representatives, and four private citizens.

Court Plan Splits Women's Council

Tulsa, Okla., April 26 (AP).—Lobby discussions on President Roosevelt's Federal judiciary proposals accentuated tonight a controversy on the plan within the general council of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

The question was whether the council would go on record as opposed to or in favor of the President's plan. Leaders said council members were divided about evenly.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace. Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. ADV.

Wheeling, Martins Ferry Threatened by Ohio; Families Flee.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 26.—Waters of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers spilled into the fringes of Pittsburgh's "golden triangle" business area tonight while residents of this steel center prepared for a possible major flood.

More than 30 hours of continuous rainfall brought the city to grips with the worst April high-water threat in its history.

The rivers surged 4 feet over the 25-foot flood stage tonight and continued to rise slowly toward a predicted peak of 36 feet.

An awakened city was on guard to prevent, if possible, repetition of the terrific damage resulting from the 1936 St. Patrick's Day flood. That flood caused approximately $200,000,000 damage and took 58 lives in the region.

Rivers Fall at Johnstown.

Johnstown, Pa., April 26 (AP).—A cessation of rainfall lasting nearly 48 hours and slowly receding rivers tonight heartened this historic "flood city," the scene of two disastrous inundations in the past half-century.

The flood-swollen Conemaugh and Stony Creek spread fear among the populace as they seeped into a half dozen low-lying streets, but tonight observers believed the threat of a major flood was over.

To the southwest in Somerset County, feeder streams which empty into Stony Creek began falling after flooding numerous highways and marooning several villages and mining settlements.

At its highest stage—17.7 feet, which is 1.7 feet above flood stage—the waters flowed into the Point Athletic Stadium at the foot of Main street and reached to within two blocks of the city hall.

Wheeling Mobilizes.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 26 (AP).—Wheeling mobilized tonight to fight the flood waters of the swollen Ohio River.

Citizens determined to prepare against the possibility of another flood like the one St. Patrick's Day in 1936, which ravaged the city and took several lives.

Works Progress Administration authorities ordered more than 100 workers to stand by for orders. Trucks and sandbags were stationed at strategic points.

Police prepared to evacuate all families in the flood zone, and called in school and church officials to arrange for housing flood refugees should the occasion arise.

Wheeling Island, a ward of the city in the center of the Ohio, would feel a flood first. More than 10,000 persons live on the island and in the past some have balked efforts of authorities to remove them from their homes during floods.

In a nearby CCC camp officers were ready to rush more than 100 young men into the city.

Ohio Rises Rapidly.

Charleston, W. Va., April 26 (AP).—The flood-besieged Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia breathed easier tonight as Wheeling prepared for trouble from the Ohio River, rapidly being filled because of pelting rains over its far-flung watershed.

A stage of 45 to 48 feet was predicted at Wheeling, from 9 to 12 feet above flood.

Local agencies were mobilizing to care for the second onrush of waters this year. WPA Administrator F. Witcher McCullough ordered workers in the northern and eastern Panhandles to prepare for evacuation work.

City Prepares for Siege.

Martins Ferry, Ohio, April 26 (AP).—The mighty Ohio River, swollen by spring rains, threatened a new flood tonight. River communities, especially in this tri-State district, prepared to withstand a siege. It was generally expected the river would reach a crest ranging from a half to three-fourths that attained in the disastrous flood of last January.

Martins Ferry, whose industrial section was partly inundated twice previously when the river went over the 46-foot stage, laid in food supplies against a similar crest.

'Old Man River' Gives Him Liberty

Because the Potomac River was rapidly inundating his home, Henry Lewis, 34, was released on his personal bond yesterday by Judge Edward M. Curran when he was arranged in Police Court on an intoxication charge.

Lewis, who had been held in the Seventh Precinct station over the week-end, was released after his wife notified police their home—a house boat, moored at the foot of K street northwest—was listing badly in the high water and in danger of capsizing.

Judge Curran decided Lewis had been punished enough by the two-day lockup and released him to salvage his furniture and effects.

Van Sweringen Rail Empire Is Bought by Trio

Hotel, where today he met Kirby for the first time.

The purchase price was not disclosed, but Wall Street analysts have figured the current market value of these securities dominating the various interlocking companies, giving control to some $3,000,000,000 worth of railroad and real estate, at around $8,000,000.

Koble read a statement on behalf of the buyers, saying the purchase was made "with a sense of responsibility to the general public."

"We have no desire," he asserted, "to control other people's investments with a little investment of our own. We do not want to be out on that kind of a limb."

He explained it was their plan, eventually, to consolidate the various railroad properties "without detriment to the hundreds of thousands of people directly and financially interested in the profitable operation of the Van Sweringen railroad enterprises."

Kolbe, who is 40 years old and a former General Motors official, emphasized:

"The money we have put into these properties is our own money, we have no special obligations to any shippers, to any banking house, or to any group."

Will Investigate Sale.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said last night the Senate committee investigating rail financing would study the sale of securities controlling the vast Von Sweringen rail empire.

Officials said the Interstate Commerce Commission likewise would look into the sale. Physical consolidation of the various Van Sweringen roads—a step described by the new owners as under consideration—would involve extensive changes in rail consolidations proposed by the commission in 1929.

Roberts Will Address G. U. Law School Fete

With Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court as the guest of honor and sole speaker, the annual dinner of the Georgetown Law School will take place tonight at the Carlton Hotel.

Approximately 80 guests are expected. Arrangements for the dinner have been made by J. V. Dillon, editor of the Georgetown Law School publication.

China Smugglers Active.

Nanking, China, April 26 (AP).—Sixty million dollars in merchandise and raw materials, principally sugar, rayon, linen, tobacco and flour, entered north China ports illegally during 1936, the Nanking industries minister said today in a report which blamed Japanese for the smuggling.

Basques Offer Surrender; Ask Diplomats' Aid

Seek Surrender.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, (Tuesday), April 27.—The Basque republican government today asked foreign diplomats at St. Jean de Luz if they would act as mediators and attempt to arrange favorable terms for surrender of besieged Bilbao to the rebels.

President Jose Antonio Aguirre sent emissaries to St. Jean de Luz to sound out diplomats formerly accredited to the Spanish loyalist government in Madrid who sought refuge in France when the rebels advanced on the Spanish capital. Argentine diplomatic sources revealed the emissaries' presence.

The emissaries arrived as Basque militia were reported retreating on most fronts around besieged Bilbao. Aguirre was preparing to remove all women, children and non-combatants.

Occupy Cities.

April 26 (AP).—Insurgent vanguards were reported without official confirmation today to have occupied the abandoned cities of Eibar and Durango, last important barriers to a great push down the mountain on the teeming Basque capital of Bilbao.

They moved against a wall of flame. Both towns were evacuated and columns of black smoke bore witness to the reported burning of Eibar, an important munitions center, by retreating government troops. Insurgents said Eibar was a "vast furnace."

The roads from Durango to Bilbao, 16 miles away, were choked with fleeing government soldiers, women and children.

The insurgents also occupied Verriz, a vital communication center.

Basque troops were declared to be in "headlong flight." Government sources, denying any loss of territory, said their troops were under "strong enemy pressure" and had been forced to modify their lines.

Insurgent Gen. Emilio Mola said more than 3,000 prisoners had been taken in two days.

Strength of Bilbao's defenders was further bolstered with the arrival of another British freighter with a cargo of food. The Sheaf Garth was the seventh to enter Bilbao since insurgents attempted to blockade the port.

With roads leading into Bilbao crowded with refugees, it was estimated 50,000 persons would be added to the city's population, already more than 400,000.

Artillery Bombing Ordered.

Madrid, April 26 (AP).—Spanish government aviators today were ordered to silence the relentless roar of insurgents, artillery, which in the past fortnight had cost Madrid some 250 lives.

Defense chief, Gen. Jose Miaja, said he had directed his aviators to drop 220-pound bombs on enemy gun emplacements in Carabanchel and Casa de Campo Park, across the Manzanares River.

At least 15 persons were killed today and more than a score injured in two bombardments. Despite the hideous roar, however, the Madrilenos had cause to hope. Early in the day 12 deserters from the marooned insurgent force of 3,000 in University City stumbled into the capital. Cut off from another insurgent force in Casa de Campo Park by Gen. Jose Miaja's artillery, the University City garrison is hungry, thirsty, and short of ammunition, said the deserters.

Three Sea Victories Claimed.

Valencia, Spain, April 26 (AP).—The Spanish government tonight listed three decisive victories in its first major offensive at sea against the insurgent navy of Gen. Francisco Franco.

Prince to Visit London.

Bucharest, Rumania, April 26 (AP).—Crown Prince Mihai plans to depart for London about May 5 to attend the coronation of King George, the government announced tonight. Thence he will go to Warsaw on behalf of his father, King Carol, to invite President Moscicki to visit Rumania.

London Bus Walkout Menaces Coronation; Short Day Sought

By the Associated Press.

London, April 26.—The King's oarsmen were miffed today because they won't haul His Majesty down the Thames tomorrow, and London worried lest a bus strike mar Coronation Day.

The city's 40,000 busmen want a 7½-hour day, rather than the present 8, and have threatened to strike at midnight April 30. The labor conciliation department sought to effect a truce, but conferees reached no decision in a five-hour session today. They were to meet again tomorrow.

The King revives an historic custom on his journey down river to open the National Museum at Greenwich, but he chose a modern naval launch rather than the gold state barge with its crimson-coated oarsmen.

The 12 royal watermen and Barge Master "Bossy" Phelps will be in the coronation procession May 12, but they mourned that "we know the vagaries of the Thames much better than the naval men who will pilot the King and Queen tomorrow."

And as the day for crownnig King George VI approached with a growing fanfare of preparation, Edward of Windsor won withdrawal in England of "Coronation Commentary," the book which referred to his tenure on the throne as marked in part by "muddling, fuddling and meddling."

Another chapter in the drama of love, abdication and coronation drew also to a quiet end. Six months ago tomorrow, the American-born Wallis Warfield Simpson obtained a probationary divorce decree from her second husband, Ernest Aldrich Simpson. The date marks an end to the probationary period. The two are expected to marry in June.

London newspapers expressed grave alarm over the bus strike prospect, and some feared such a walkout might extend to subway and suburban transportation.

The bus workers had insisted they would accept no compromise and that they would not agree to a month's truce to carry through the coronation period.

King George's round of precoronation festivities tomorrow revives the centuries-old custom, when monarchs journeyed by the Thames to avoid plague when London was a jumble of narrow and often evil-smelling streets.

Riots, Drop in Market Harass France on Eve of Parliament

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 26.—Widespread labor troubles, strike violence and a stock market slump harassed the French government on the eve of the opening of Parliament tomorrow.

Employes of the Latecoere, a nonnationalized airplane factory at Toulouse, started something new by going to work against employers' orders.

On strike since April 17, they solved their differences with the management in principle, but accused the company of holding up final details.

Owners called police, claiming illegal occupation of their factory and demanding evacuation of the workers. Police declined to act.

The ten-week-old building workers' strike at Nantes flared into violence. Francois Bernard, head of the Building Employers Association, was beaten by strikers, who smashed windows and damaged property.

Thirty thousand small storekeepers met in Paris and protested a two-day-a-week closing order. They encouraged stores to defy the order and stay open.

All government bonds fell on the bourse. Bank of France stocks dropped 585 francs, about $26, because of unrest and demands that a public works program be financed from banks and insurance companies. Today's closing quotation was 6,950 francs, against Friday's close of 7,535 francs.

Brokers called the session "black Monday" because of the prevailing pessimism which drove stocks down.

Britain Ready To Issue First Of War Bonds

Warns Insurgents to Keep Hands Off Bilbao-Bound Ships.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 26.—Great Britain asked its people to buy $500,000,000 worth of defense today and at the same time warned the insurgent Spanish junta at Salamanca against "interference" with British ships en route to famished Bilbao.

Disclosing the government's plan to finance part of its $7,500,000,000 national defense program, Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain announced a £100,000,000 ($500,000,000) issue of 2½ per cent bonds at one-half of 1 per cent below par.

The chancellor explained in Commons that this first issue will be "in short to medium term securities redeemable before the end of 1948 in annual drawings at par of not less than 20 per cent of the amount of the loan, the first drawings to be in the autumn of 1944."

While the chancellor dealt with securities, the foreign office dealt with security. The office directed Sir Henry G. Chilton, British Ambassador to Spain, to take diplomatic action against the insurgents' interference with British ships on the high seas.

Three British food ships en route to Bilbao were threatened by insurgent warship guns until H. M. S. Hood, Britain's greatest battle cruiser, steamed up and escorted them to the 3-mile limit, from where the Basque government furnished protection.

The British foreign office and insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco are 3 miles apart on their definitions of the "high seas." The British contend "the high seas" stretch to within 3 miles of the Spanish shore. Franco says the limit is 6 miles.

This dispute came up again today after Sir Henry's instructions had been wired. The insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera tried to prevent a Glasgow coal boat, the Oak Grove, from entering Santander.

The Almirante Cervera wirelessed the near-by British cruiser Shropshire she intended to halt the Oak Grove inside the "6-mile limit." The British ship replied she would give the Oak Grove protection to the 3-mile limit. The Almirante Cervera pulled away.

Nicholas of Rumania Starts Exile in Vienna

Vienna, April 26 (AP).—Nicholas of Rumania began his exile from Rumania today in the seclusion of his hotel suite, stripped of title by his brother, King Carol, because he refused to give up his commoner wife.

The former prince would remain in Austria several days, a spokesman said, and then go to Italy. He flew here from Bucharest today. His wife had preceded him abroad.

Italo-German Armed Alliance Believed Near

Goering will return to Berlin tomorrow to report to Der Fuehrer on his conversation with Il Duce.

The intensity of Italo-German collaboration, apparently affecting military and economic matters, convinced many diplomats that a new European alliance was in the making. It was reported that Goering, during his visit with Mussolini, arranged for Il Duce to go to Germany for a conference with Hitler.

German officials insisted, however, that Mussolini's German trip was not imminent, but might occur this fall. Others said Mussolini would visit Berlin, Budapest and Vienna on a flying jaunt sometime in June.

Goering and Hitler, in addition to their discussions of the war in Spain and last week's Austro-Italian compromise—whereby German "collaboration" will be restored in Austria—were believed to have discussed closer industrial co-operation between Italy and Germany.

C. I. O. May Bring Third Party Move

St. Louis, April 26 (AP).—Sidney Hillman, a leader in the Committee for Industrial Organization of Labor, said today the C. I. O. was not organized to sponsor a third political party, but "may result in a third party movement."

"We reserve the right of independent political action," said Hillman, "and support policies designed to aid the common man. We are aware that we have the organization to aid in organizing people in support of a liberal group. The C. I. O. may result in a third party movement. But it is not organized for that purpose and there are no plans to create a definite third party."

Chinese Quint Story Lacks Confirmation

Peiping, April 26 (AP).—Confirmation was completely lacking tonight on the reported birth of quintuplets to a peasant woman at Luansiehn, 100 miles northeast of Peiping.

The native newspaper which originally carried the report, attributed to a radio broadcast, was unable to verify it; independent inquiry elicited no supporting information, and it was believed the report, therefore, was erroneous.

World Revolt Hailed By 40 Soviet Slogans

Moscow, April 26 (AP).—World revolution and unity to crush fascism were emphasized in many of the 40 slogans announced today by the Communist Party for its May Day celebration.

"Long live the Socialist revolution all over the world!" read one of the slogans.

Another declared:

"Fascism is a terrorist policy of capitalism and land-owners against the workers and peasants. Let us mobilize our forces for the struggle against fascism."

'Intrigue' Hinted In Vienna Slaying

Vienna, April 26 (AP).—Police tonight were without explanation of the death of Ingrid Wingreen, daughter of the Paraguayan minister to Austria, who was found slain in her automobile yesterday.

Authorities announced her apparently excellent income was explained by money received through Germany from her father. The newspaper Telegraf had said the source was under investigation.

One police official hinted at a theory of political intrigue. "We have a clew, and robbery apparently played no part," he said.

Miss Wingreen's purse was untouched. Her father had been on leave since last June. (At his Asuncion apartment, the minister, Gustavo Wingreen, was prostrated. The foreign office declined to comment.)

Flood Waters Rise Again.

For the third time in 13 months certain sections of the Nation are again menaced by flood conditions. The experience which Washington is passing through, with the swollen Potomac spilling over its banks, is being repeated elsewhere on a larger and very much more dangerous scale.

In Pittsburgh the water has again risen above the 25-foot flood wall. Now as in January and in March, 1936, the "Golden Triangle" which is the heart of that city's business district, is in danger of being flooded. In 1936, in fact, the damage done by the flood in that vast watershed from Johnstown to Pittsburgh and south to Wheeling amounted to more than $200,000,000.

It is no new experience, however, for the cities along the Ohio and its tributaries to be threatened by flood. During the last 60 years, in fact, the Ohio River Valley has experienced no fewer than 55 floods. It is a curious commentary on human nature and governmental indifference that so little has been done to prevent these recurring dangers to human life and property.

Nor is this because the subject has not been studied. A vast amount of information is now available, not only as to the causes of the floods in the Ohio, Mississippi and other river valleys, but also as to the ways of harnessing the waters. Yet, except in isolated instances, little has been done to carry out the findings of a long succession of experts.

Last year, to be sure, Congress did go so far as to enact a measure authorizing the expenditure of close to $500,000,000 for flood control projects. But the money was never forthcoming because it was not available. Now the budgetary problem is such that the appropriation of any such vast sum for flood prevention is out of the question.

In some instances the States and local governments can adopt effective flood control measures. Moreover, the National Government is in a position to help somewhat even now. It can do so by employing a larger portion of the labor available under the WPA on flood prevention and control projects. In that way the Administration can not only take care of a still pressing relief problem but also help stave off recurring disasters in large and populous sections of the Nation.

The Rockefeller Foundation.

In 1936 the Rockefeller Foundation gave away $11,300,000. The purpose, in the words of its charter, was "to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world." The extent to which this noble aim was furthered is indicated in a review of the year's work just published.

Only in the field of public health is the foundation an operating organization.. The Rockefeller Institute is well known, perhaps primarily, for its gains against yellow fever. Contrary to common assumptions, however, it is revealed in the review that this scourge of mankind has not been completely eradicated. Yellow fever, it has been discovered, may not be stopped merely by eliminating certain types of mosquitoes. There is an epidemic variety of the disease which occurs in regions where no mosquitoes exist. Toward its control the institute is now diligently working.

In addition to public health, the foundation also supports researches in the medical, natural and social sciences. These are undertaken in universities and laboratories, mostly in the United States. One-third of last year's funds, however, was distributed abroad to institutions in 53 foreign countries, ranging from Scandinavia to Java. Mental hygiene has been a particular interest of the foundation and many of the projects underwritten were in this field. Other principal studies of the foundation included experimental biology, social security and public administration.

But the largest single outlay of money went for promotion of the humanities. The stimulation of Far Eastern study was a noteworthy phase of this program. Educational institutions and libraries were also generously aided under it. And a surprising interest was the encouragement of drama and the improvement of moving pictures and radio programs. The explanation of their concern for these last indicates the fine sensibilities of the foundation's trustees:

> When some future archaeologist digs down through the crust of our civilization, it would be a sad reflection on our sense of balance and proportion if he had to report that ours was a day of steel and speed and material comforts, and of some measure of social control, but with only faint traces of aesthetic appreciation.

The Heritage Of Freedom.

Another difficult hurdle for those who thoughtlessly advocate packing the Supreme Court is provided by yesterday's decision in the famous Herndon case.

This 5-4 opinion revokes the long prison sentence imposed on a paid Communist organizer under a Georgia anti-insurrection statute dating from the "tragic era" after the Civil War. And in overruling the State of Georgia in a case where the evidence of subversive agitation on the part of the convicted man was very strong, the court nobly upheld its long tradition of safeguarding individual liberties against the coercive power of the State. Solicitude for the constitutional rights of a Negro Communist, glib in his fanatical claptrap, was as pronounced as any interest the court has ever shown in defending a powerful corporation from encroachments forbidden the Federal Government by the organic law.

There was no need of yesterday's decision to illustrate the even-handed justice which is ordinarily characteristic of the court, toward human as much as toward property rights. Only in wartime, when the operations of the Government are necessarily of paramount importance, has its record of protecting the guaranteed liberties of every American citizen been subject to criticism. As the majority opinion said yesterday: "The power of a State to abridge freedom of speech and of assembly is the exception rather than the rule and the penalizing even of utterances of a defined character must find its justification in a reasonable apprehension of danger to organized government . . . The limitation upon individual liberty must have appropriate relation to the safety of the State."

That is well-established doctrine, which Communist as well as Conservative may invoke within the broad charter of our constitutional liberties. But its reiteration at this particular moment, in a case which to many seemed border-line, is of unusual importance.

If the President's plan were approved, if there were precedent for packing the court to prevent those 5-4 decisions which reflect the naturally close balance of opinion in highly controversial issues, human rights would be jeopardized just as much as property rights. Possibly President Roosevelt himself would never pack the Supreme Court to make sure that Communists would be sent to concentration camps. But it is not difficult to imagine some other President invoking Mr. Roosevelt's formula to achieve just that end.

Essentially for that reason nearly all real liberals, as contrasted with what Senator Wheeler calls "official liberals," are in last-ditch opposition to Mr. Roosevelt's attempt to undermine the independence of the judiciary. It is because of the danger to human liberties involved in a precedent of this nature that the country so resented the President's foolish assertion that "substantially the same elements" oppose him on this as fought his re-election last November.

The point was made by Amos Pinchot, whose liberalism needs no self-defense, in an open letter to the President printed on the page opposite yesterday. It was made by many others before the Herndon decision, which only points the inescapable moral a little more clearly.

But Mr. Pinchot did not confine his criticisms to the obvious dangers inherent in packing the Supreme Court to insure that constitutional guarantees shall no longer have validity. He also pointed to the little analyzed part of the bill whereby specially appointed circuit judges could be assigned, at the edict of the Chief Justice alone, "for service in the circuit court of appeals for any circuit."

Such "flying squadrons" of hand-picked judges, as Federal District Judge Knox, of New York, described them to the Senate Judiciary Committee a fortnight ago, might well tend to extend the degradation of the judiciary which is so shamelessly foreshadowed for the Supreme Court. Mr. Pinchot does not exaggerate when he asserts that such aspects of the President's plan are "in line with the corrupt administrations of the Stuart kings, who removed fair judges and put their own on the bench in order to serve their ends and buttress the power of the crown."

Toward reefs of this character the United States will continue to drift, until the President's plan to pack the court is soundly and uncompromisingly beaten. The Herndon case, reaffirming the right of the most humble individual to protection against governmental tyranny, is only further proof of the vital heritage of freedom which Mr. Roosevelt would so casually endanger.

Reanimating Rumors.

Cause and effect are sometimes hard to distinguish. Yesterday's stock market suffered a number of severe declines, especially in the shares of companies interested in the production of raw materials, such as copper and rubber. Cotton also dropped about a dollar a bale. There followed a revival of the rumor, not long ago vigorously denied, that the Government is contemplating a change in the purchase price of gold.

But the decline in shares of companies producing raw materials needs no such explanation. It follows naturally from the collapse of sundry speculative commodity pools in the European markets. Raw rubber has dropped several cents a pound. Copper, driven up in London to undue levels in spite of heavy sales in advance from American and other producers, has reacted to a lower level. The decline in the shares of the raw material companies is readily attributable to the reduced prices of their products. There is not even any need to build a labored relationship to some imaginary policy in the Government's gold price policy.

Sometimes speculators act on rumors, and sometimes rumors act on speculators. Sometimes the two are so mingled as to cause and effect that it is impossible to say which is which. In the present instance it looks as though a speculative reaction has breathed new life into a rumor already denied so authoritatively that there is no reason to give it the slightest credence.

Dangers Of Reorganization.

Senator Byrd's zeal for economy is beyond question. He is also entitled to a large measure of credit for his pioneer work in the field of reorganizing executive agencies of the Government. But it is difficult to see how he could save $24,500,000 by consolidation of the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

The total operating budget of the FHA for the fiscal year 1938 is $10,000,000. That agency is now collecting about $6,000,000 per year for services rendered. For operation of the HOLC this year Congress appropriated $30,000,000. Thus their budgets total $40,000,000. The saving suggested by Senator Byrd would leave only $15,500,000 for operation of the consolidated agency, or about half the amount which the HOLC is now spending as a separate unit. If the work of these two agencies is to continue, therefore, Mr. Byrd's estimate of the saving which might be effected by a merger seems to be greatly exaggerated.

Organizations dealing with housing have been set up in the most haphazard fashion in recent years. The need for consolidation in some instances is acute. Instead of adopting a single policy and providing appropriate agencies to carry it out, Congress has authorized various unconnected experiments, with duplication of effort and confusion of objectives. Undoubtedly this sloppy procedure has given rise to waste and inefficiency.

Construction of low-cost housing, for example, should have been confined to one organization. It is now generally conceded, however, that this is not a proper activity for the Federal Government, except for demonstration purposes. Since consolidation has been so long delayed, the most promising course is liquidation of the PWA housing division and the Resettlement Administration's "green belt" enterprises. When more funds are available for slum reclamation a new start should be made, centering responsibility in local governments.

In no circumstances could all existing housing agencies be successfully merged into one conglomerate organization. The FHA and HOLC, for instance, serve entirely different purposes. The former is a business institution, chiefly in the insurance of mortgages. The latter is an emergency organization set up to rescue home owners in distress during the depths of the depression. From the viewpoint of sound administration it would be most unfortunate to inject into the FHA the less rigid policies under which the HOLC must operate.

A more fruitful field for co-ordination appears to lie between the FHA and the Federal Home Loan Banks. These banks are designed to facilitate the financing of mortgages by keeping lending institutions in this field in a more liquid position. That service is rather closely allied to the mortgage insurance function of FHA. To bring about co-ordination between the two institutions would be an intricate task, but the net result should be to strengthen the system through which capital flows into the home building industry.

Whatever is done along this line, however, should be chiefly aimed at the establishment of sound policy. Casual shifts might ultimately involve more waste than economy. If Congress is ready to swing the economy ax realistically, it could undoubtedly eliminate a considerable number of time-servers from all emergency organizations, with or without the merger of organizations.

"The reason husbands and wives don't understand each other is because they belong to different sexes," says Dorothy Dix, who seems to find out everything.

The Third Degree.

From the Hartford Courant.

There is no reasonable argument that can be made for the third degree. Neither of its common purposes, to extort a confession and to punish a suspect against whom there is not enough evidence to secure a conviction, can be justified. To be sure, torture, applied long enough, will generally secure a confession, but the innocent suspect is quite as willing as the guilty to sign the prepared statement when the signature is the price of ending the torture. For centuries, both civil and canon law have recognized the unreliability of evidence produced by torture, but policemen who are either too stupid or too lazy to secure proper evidence still pin their faith on it. When the method is used, not to extract a confession but to punish a suspect, the third degree is even harder to defend, for the necessary premise of that argument is the failure of the whole legal theory.

The Peace Strike.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am surprised and disappointed in your paper. A headline in The Post of April 22 carries the news, "D. C. College's Anti-Fascism Strikes Flop." In the first place, the strike was not an anti-fascism strike. It was primarily and essentially a strike against war; fascism was only a secondary consideration.

In the second place, the movement was not a "flop." The news story entirely neglects to mention that at Wilson Teachers College with the sanction of the administration the entire student body (about 500 men and women) quit classes at 11 a. m. to listen to a peace talk by Representative Caroline O'Day. The student council sponsored the demonstration and distributed anti-war literature afterwards. The article also failed to mention that American University yesterday held a peace forum at which Representative Teigan, of Minnesota, spoke.

The Post, however, not only failed to tell the whole truth, but actually published an untruth. There were in attendance at the morning meeting of the G. W. strikers at Union Methodist Church not "exactly 68," but a crowd estimated by Representative Teigan as at least 235.

The general tone of the article seems to me an attempt to discredit the peace movement by connecting it with radicalism.

Natural Elevated Road.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since there is much talk of an elevated road through our city, I wonder why no one has thought of our elevated road made by nature, namely, the eastern ridge of our beautiful Rock Creek Driveway.

Most of this land already belongs to the District. It runs clear from Lincoln Memorial to Rock Creek Park. A good wide boulevard for private cars only would provide a tremendous outlet for Government employes' cars, it would be a safety drive with very few cross streets. The congestion of downtown Washington has become a terror to thousands of motorists. This boulevard would be a blessing to us all and save us many accidents.

The beauty of this drive with its view down into the valley would add much to our city, and while we are about it, why not call it Jefferson Memorial Boulevard.

Democracy Or Dictatorship?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an address at the annual dinner of the Foreign Policy Association in New York, Ambassador Georges Bonnet, of France, urged a firm understanding among the "democracies," notably Great Britain, France, Belgium and the United States, the subject of his address having been "The Future of Democracies in the World."

The point the Ambassador stressed was that it would be a mistake for men who are attached to the ideals of liberty to escape decisions and responsibilities while nonchalantly waiting for events which would entail action by the masses themselves, without orderly leadership. He said that within national boundaries democracies had already solved the the great problems brought about by the world crisis. He said that when one talked of curtailing armaments there was the rejoinder from others that such action would reduce the price of raw materials and thus increase the number of unemployed in their country.

It is puzzling to hear diplomats talk of democracies when speaking of countries which are democracies in name only, and condemn the dictatorships which in some cases afford more real liberty plus protection to their citizens. France, for example, has a Socialist government. As the government is still very remotely situated from the individual Frenchman, worker or peasant, the average citizen does not feel the effect of government policy as it is felt by the average citizen in the United States.

The average American reads one or more newspapers every day and is interested in a large variety of subjects affecting people all over the world. He therefore knows what is going on all the time; in fact, he perhaps takes more interest in foreign affairs than is really good for him. On the other hand, the average European reads very few newspapers because: In the first place, the cost of living is so high they will not spend the money for the purpose. In the second place, most Europeans are not as "internationally minded" as Americans have become since the great war. Further, they prefer to spend their evenings or spare time with their families, discussing their own affairs rather than the affairs of others.

X. Y. Z.
New York, April 24.

The effect of having a Socialist government in France has not really struck home as far as the French farmers are concerned, who, after all, comprise the most solid part of the population of France. The farmers are the ones who would have the most to lose by an extreme Socialist government that would show any tendency to disrupt the present economic scheme in France.

Right now France is in a very critical state, being torn between: (1) Fear of Germany; (2) fear that the situation in Spain may involve her in a war which would have an altogether different alignment than the war of 1914-18. France is not even sure what attitude the United States would take in the event of a new war in Europe, realizing that while there are definite Socialist and Communist groups in the United States who are against war, that there are even other groups who are conservative who today are arguing that they will participate in no European war unless we are attacked. Prominently identified with this movement is Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Whether this condition will prevail or not in case a war breaks out in Europe, nobody can say at this time. It might be questionable that if the alignment in the next war in Europe would be France, Belgium and Russia, being the "Red" groups, against Germany, Italy, Portugal and the rebels in Spain, just what attitude might be taken by the Communist and Socialist groups in the United States.

It might even be conceivable that if a great excitement were caused in the United States over the crisis of the democracies, a new American government headed by John L. Lewis might conceivably enter into the fray on the side of France and the other nations as against the dictatorships.

If Ambassador Bonnet had this in mind when he shot his bolt of the new French propaganda in the United States, I am afraid he is reckoning without the sanity which I hope the average American will exercise when the time comes for this Government to decide whether it will become involved in another European war or not.

I am sure that Americans are going to be in a position to distinguish between the constructive results achieved in the dictatorships which do not promise the millennium but have shown some practical results and the so-called democracies which claim that they will solve every problem under the sun and yet do nothing.

Approve Memorial Plans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Thomas Jefferson Memorial, what a howl! One would think the editors were the only people that admired the Japanese cherry blossoms and that President Roosevelt cared no more for a cherry tree than George Washington.

That sacred Tidal Basin, isn't it something? The engineers do manage to keep that mudhole and cesspool from stinking. It in itself is a hideous thing, without form and void, bordered by the cheapest kind of a rock wall—a thing on the Mall like a calico patch on an evening gown.

Its location there will cause Independence avenue to be finished through, with the attending architectural grandeur bordering its sister boulevard on the opposite side of the Mall.

If "Boylan's Folly" turns out to be like "Seward's Folly" it would be well if the American people sent only fools to Congress instead of so many would-be solons.

The editors fought Jefferson in his day; the editors of today are determined that Jefferson shall not be honored, that Jefferson's policy of championing the rights of the common man shall not be given public recognition and acclaim. They would rather keep a walled-up mudhole on the Mall than to see Thomas Jefferson receive the homage that is his due.

The editors bring up the ruse that the disorder incident to construction would be disagreeable, unsightly and inconvenient. Why did they not raise the same objection when the Lincoln Memorial was being built and retain the view from the top of the monument of the beautiful marsh that was there with its frog ponds and their bordering willows?

Or why did they allow the Arlington Memorial bridge to be built with those unsightly construction shacks and piles of lumber, gravel and stone, right there in front of the Lincoln Memorial? These views were perfectly horrid to an editor's esthetic eye.

While the cherry trees bring into Washington hundreds of thousands of guests every year, causing serious congestion of traffic, yet during the past 19 years not one dollar has been appropriated to remedy this congestion and thus make it more convenient and comfortable for these guests within the city's gates who spend millions of dollars every year to come here to see the cherry trees, as well as other millions of dollars here in Washington.

The proposed memorial to Thomas Jefferson would add more drives in that area, cause the opening through of Independence avenue and give to the Japanese cherry trees a classic setting in ornate marble instead of that coarse rock wall around a hideous mudhole we have there at present.

ZACK SPRATT.
Washington, April 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Could anything be more incongruous than this agonizing "unpatriotism" of the D. A. R. now in session here in Washington? Here to celebrate first and foremost the Declaration of Independence, many of these women are making speeches against the beautiful memorial designed by Pope to the memory our greatest patriot.

This talk against the destruction of a few cherry trees is simply the argument of children. How long is the life of these trees? They have been replanted a number of times so far. I hope the President will be firm about this as he is about everything that is right and pay no attention to this propaganda that is simply a continuation by the same people who did so much to bring on their own defeat in 1936. Will they never learn that their propaganda is nothing to their cause but a boomerang?

Inhambane.

So far as I know there is scarcely a chance that I have ever been to Mozambique, yet every once in a while I am brought face to face with the predicament: Have I or haven't I? There are so many uncertain certainties these days, and there is something in the witchery of geographic names that at times is strangely disconcerting; it takes you places until you can nearly believe you have actually been there. But then, man will believe almost anything, for (to borrow some words from Mr. Cabell) he is loath to barter lovely ideas for colorless ones.

Lately I have been reading proof of a book on East African birds, in which, besides the numerous curiosa ornithologica, were many geographical enticements: Djibouti, for example, and Addis Ababa (I wondered whether even any birds were left there now). Djamdjam, Kilimanjaro, Kenya, Kikuyu, Tanganyika, Limpopo (the Kolokolo Bird told the Elephant's Child to go "to the banks of the great grey-green greasy Limpopo River all set about with fever-trees," where he found the Bi-Colored Python Rock Snake) —and dozens of others; some nebulously familiar, and some not on any map of the "Dark Continent" I'd ever seen. Then came one that I couldn't get by for a long time—Inhambane.

Inhambane! When had I been to Inhambane? I saw monkeys playing in a missionary's garden and a small boy chasing them away. When had I been to Inhambane? Ah . . . yes. It was Ed. I roomed with Ed at college. His folks had been missionaries. It was Ed who had chased the monkeys away. They had been eating his pumpkins. Later he had made one of his first scientific experiments with them and had determined that monkeys can not count beyond four . . . or was it three?

At 19 Ed could still execute all the Zulu clicks with remarkable eclat. He remembered one or two Zulu or Gitonga hymns they had sung at the mission. Sometimes Harry, another missionary son, would come into our room, and he and Ed would click back and forth, just for fun. I was then studying Greek, and to me there seemed to be something of a common ground of unintelligibility between the two tongues. Ed is now a zoologist at the University of San Francisco and Harry a physician at Dearborn, Mich. I wonder if they can still click Zulu. I know they could tell you a lot about Inhambane.

Inhambane was a name that stuck, that beat itself into your brain. I don't know what the word means, though there is a legend that it is a corruption of an old pre-Portuguese native name meaning good-bye. Whatever it means, not many towns have a better or more euphonious name. It has a lot of jungle in it ,and it sounds like a tom-tom. Perhaps it does mean good-bye, for we are told that it is a very unhealthful place and that many Europeans have died there.

* * *

Strange that only the other day I took another trip to Inhambane. Rummaging around in a book store I found a dog-eared copy of Bishop Hogue's life of "G. Harry Agnew: A Pioneer Missionary," the father of the Harry who used to click Zulu with my roommate Ed. Agnew came so to love Inhambane that he wanted to be "laid away to rest there," but instead, in 1903, at the age of 39, he was to be buried in the Transvaal, after a siege of fever and hematuria. He knew the Inhambane of half a century ago. With the true missionary spirit he says: "The town is a perfect sink of moral corruption. I have often thought it would baffle Abraham, were he back on earth, to find five righteous people in that modern Sodom."

That, of course, was long before my time . . . long, long before I was there.

This business of travel is a strange thing indeed. Henry Thoreau, I think, had a lot in common with some of us—so many of the same places we have never visited. Said Thoreau:

> I have but few companions on the shore,
> They scorn the strand who sail upon the sea,
> Yet oft I think the ocean they've sailed o'er
> Is deeper known upon the strand to me.
>
> The middle sea contains no crimson dulse,
> Its depeer waves cast up no pearls to view,
> Along the shore my hand is on its pulse,

Yet in one week Thoreau sailed around the world on the Concord and Merrimac Rivers, and I dare say he too touched at Inhambane.

Awakening In Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to say how much I approve of Mr. Borras' reply to the correspondent who advocated the return of Alphonso XIII. As an American who lived in Spain during the reign of the last Spanish monarch, I am horrified at even the suggestion that the Spanish people should again be put to such torture.

It has taken centuries for a real awakening to occur in Spain, but now that this has happened, the people of that noble little country are capable of molding their own destinies, if but given a chance to do so by the rest of the world.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Nearing 70.

IT IS SAD, indeed, to note the advance of the years in old Homer Cummings, but his sixty-seventh birthday is coming up next week, and we all know how the old gentleman stands on the matter of retirement at 70—the age when human judgment goes definitely haywire, especially in matters of the law, which is Mr. Cummings' profession.

That gives Mr. Cummings only three years to go, and I suppose he must be faltering slightly even now, because age doesn't just knock a man silly, like a clout with a nickel ball bat, on his seventieth birthday but creeps up in the late 60's—insidious and inevitable. By the time a man has seen his sixty-seventh birthday he must be pretty well along in the decline which becomes total and permanent three years later, but the pity of it is that he can't sense the gradual failure of his faculties and always thinks of himself as the exception.

Yet old Homer knows full well that when a human critter, and particularly a lawyer, arrives at the age from which he is now only three short years away he becomes an obdurate old josher, living in the past and resentful of the swift, excited pace of a world with which his aged mind and frame cannot keep up.

Still, just to look at the old gentleman now or pass the time of day with him you would hardly suspect that he was so close to the deadline, for his step is firm and his eye clear and he speaks with neither crack nor quaver in his voice. But, after all, he was born in 1870—a horse-and-buggy baby who in 1940 will be one with Charlie Hughes, Pierce Butler, Georgie Sutherland and all that doddering crew.

• • • •

OLD HOMER goes back a very far piece, but, being human and a lawyer, when the time comes to pack his books and papers and for goodness' sake get out of a busy world's way, as like as not he will do the same as those other superannuated obstacles who have glared through their specs with watery eyes and declared they never felt better in all their born days.

In the words of an old song, Homer ain't much hair on the top of his head in the place where the wool had oughta grow, and with so many years behind him his mind must be deeply rooted in the past, for that is his official view of septuagenarians, of which he almost has the honor to be one.

His present term as Attorney General of the United States of America, in this interpretation of fitness which old Homer has indorsed with selfless loyalty to Mr. Big, will have to expire some time before the end of the Roosevelt Administration unless, of course, he develops that senile tenancy so offensive in the aged members of the Supreme Court and, like them, hangs around flouting his own earlier judgment and impeding the progress of man.

And if he does try to hang on, Mr. Roosevelt will have to send the cops around to sling the poor old dodo down his own marble stairs at the Department of Justice, a spectacle I should not wish to see.

• • • •

AND AFTER THAT, what? Considering old Homer's own judgment of the mental capacity of old men, who is going to hire him to do any lawing when he is rising threescore years and ten?

Will he retire to Stamford, Conn., to sit around the city hall, where once he reigned as mayor, whittling the weary days away, with an ear cocked for the rustle of angels' wings, or will he put a sign out in Washington and sit for customers forewarned by his own saying that a man his age is not fitting to take a case to law?

Though Stamford, Greenwich and New Canaan are full of economic royalists, Homer gets a good report from the neighbors up his way, and I make out that the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Liberty League would be glad to knit the old gentleman a good warm shawl for presentation three years hence.

His old bones will be cold then, and the air may be still coolish when his birthday falls in 1940, and only a few former brokers and retired manufacturers would seriously propose to just take him out and shoot him when his usefulness is at an end.

Three short years to go! How fast the scurrying days will race and how soon he will waken on an April morning to realize that—no fooling—Homer Cummings is now an old man in all the meaning of the term that Mr. Roosevelt meant and he himself indorsed.

But, meantime, happy birthday, old-timer, and do you remember 'way back when if a fellow hired a rig to take his girl out riding he always asked the livery man, "Does this hoss shy at automobiles?"

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Call for a Boulevard Boss.

There is now talk of a National Traffic Czar, a sort of Judge Landis of the Red and Green Light World.

• • • •

Michael A. Connor, Connecticut Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, is the father of the idea. He thinks it is high time the country stopped making traffic rules and began co-ordinating 'em.

• • • •

The trouble with our traffic regulations today is that they are more congested than the traffic.

• • • •

Every time a set of rules and regulations comes down one alley it gets into a jam of rules and regulations moving in an opposite direction.

• • • •

One community allows turns on red and another puts you "in stir" for it. One city's traffic light system has an intermediate or yellow light and the next one flashes directly from green to red, with no time out for gear shifting.

• • • •

One State has its stop signs painted on the highway and the next one has them on sign-posts.

• • • •

A motorist going from State to State never knows whether his driving habits come under the head of good behavior or insubordination.

• • • •

With auto accidents and fatalities increasing despite all safety campaigns, Mr. Connor proposes that the States appoint a Dictator of Driving. It will be his job to co-ordinate the regulations, systematize the safety-first campaigns and see that there is some agreement on what constitutes a traffic light.

• • • •

Under present conditions a good part of the traffic is composed of motor commissioners, traffic enforcement officials and safety experts whizzing from State to State, hell-bound for safety conventions and no two having the same set of ideas.

• • • •

At a recent convention of safety experts they called the roll twice a day to see how many of the delegates had been in auto accidents on the way from their hotels to the convention hall.

• • • •

Maybe a Judge Landis of the Boulevards is the solution. Let's try a High Commissioner of Cut-outs, Crashes and Collisions! And this department makes one suggestion: invest him with power to suspend from any league a driver who thinks a car is operated exclusively by horn.

Japan's Army

"Middle Strata" Composed For Most Part Of Officers Below General Rank Are Principal Troublemakers, Writer Says.

By Frank H. Hedges.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

A SPOILED CHILD naturally becomes extremely difficult to control; the more it is humored the more difficult this control becomes. This, in simple terms, is the problem that the Empire of Japan now faces in regard to its own army or, rather, in regard to one section of the army, which a year ago was called the Younger Element but is now known as the Middle Strata.

This spoiled child was recently given some very severe spankings by the members of the House of Representatives before that body was dissolved and a new election ordered. Like the average spoiled child, the Japanese army is sulky and resentful, but it is also scheming to get back at its attackers and reverse their respective positions, once more to become the spoiled darling of the empire that everyone will humor and let have its own way.

The army has had very much its own way for more than five years past. Not only has it dictated the formation of every cabinet since the fall of that headed by Premier Inukai because of his assassination on May 15, but it has been the determined voice in such vital matters of foreign affairs as Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations, its conquistadorial attitude toward China, its flouting of the Soviet Union, its pact with Germany and its spiteful flings at the British Empire.

Not only has it year after year greedily gobbled up more and more of the national budget, but it has to a large extent forced private business to shape its course to fit military needs or wishes. Not only has it effectively silenced its critics until the very recent past revived them, but it has posed as the prime organ of patriotism and loyalty to the throne.

Much of this privileged position has been lost during the past 12 months. The military insurrection of February 26-29 started this reversal in the fortunes of the Japanese army; the conclusion of the anti-Communist pact with Berlin greatly accelerated it; the outspoken criticism of the army and army methods in the recent session of the Diet has placed the army distinctly on the defensive, putting it at bay, and that is a dangerous position for Japan.

Occasion has been taken before now to point out that the Japanese army is far from being a unit, that not all Japanese in army uniforms are militarists by any means, and that not all of Japan's rabid militarists are in uniform. A glance at the Japanese army will reveal certain interesting facts.

Senior Officers Generally Moderate.

THE SENIOR officers are, on the whole, fairly moderate in their views and outlook, are genuinely patriotic with something of an intelligent understanding of the proper functions and legitimate rights of an army in any nation. In themselves, there is little to object to, but the trouble arises from the fact that these men no longer govern and control the whole of the army. The survival of the feudalistic concept of individualistic warfare makes it possible for some of their subordinates to flout the properly constituted authority and to disregard military discipline which in most countries would be met with discharge at least, perhaps, with court martial and drastic punishment.

This group of semi-independent army officers constitutes what is now known as the Middle Strata. Among them are some major generals and even a few lieutenant generals, but most of them are colonels, majors and on down into the ranks of captains and lieutenants. They have drunk deeply of the glory of conquest on the soil of Manchuria and they have imbibed of the strong wine of intense nationalism, of sovereign worship, of what they conceive to be Japan's destiny which is not unlike the dreams of Napoleon and of the general superiority of the Japanese people as the Children of the Gods.

They are called the Middle Strata now because, as in some geological formations, they constitute a granite-like strata between the senior officers and the junior officers and enlisted men. So far, all attempts to blast through this strata, both from above and from below, have failed. Many Japanese believe there is no hope for the end of militaristic rule in the worst sense of that term until this strata has worked itself on up to the top of the army and then passed over to the retired list. That will require a decade, perhaps longer, and in the meantime the grave danger is risked that as the now junior officers rise in rank they will be absorbed into this Middle Strata.

There are very strong forces at work on this nationalistic granite in the army, however. Some of them are attempting to blast holes in it; others are endeavoring to wear it down gradually as water finally dissolves hard rock. Success may or may not attend these efforts, but what is more likely is that the anti-military sentiment of the nation will grow around and encyst the middle stratum, will strangle and render it powerless, due to the increasing anti-army attitude of the Japanese public, to the fact that the army is so steadily augmenting its bill that the day will come when Japan simply will not be able to pay that bill, and to the general mismanagement of nonmilitary affairs by military men.

Younger Element Are As Yet Unknown Quantity.

BELOW THIS middle stratum in the Japanese army are the younger officers, and they are as yet an unknown quantity. They are nearer to civilian life in point of years, and so better abel to hear and heed the voice of the people, but at the same time they are posssesed with a hero worship of the leaders of the middle stratum.

The enlisted personnel of Japan's army, roughly a quarter of a million men, is largely obtained by the selective service law. This means that about half are mustered out annually and a new crop of men takes their place. They, of course, are very close to the people and to the soil, for most of them come from the farm rather than the city. On the whole, they are docile and obedient, but if the army went too greatly against the wishes of the masses of the Japanese people the officers might easily find the men in ranks on the side of the people and against the army.

There is still another extremely important element of the Japanese army to consider, and that is the thousands upon thousands of men in the Imperial Reservists Association. Every man who has served with the colors remains on the army reserve list until he is 45 years old, and every one of these men is eligible to membership in this association. It is controlled directly by the army and, like most former soldiers, the men look back on their days in barracks or in the field with fond memories, no matter how bitter and trying the experience may have been at the time.

In this Imperial Reservists Association the army, if it dare to do so, has more than a nucleus for the pro-Fascist Rightist political party which the middle stratum desires to see organized and wax strong enough to defeat the existing political parties, capture control of the Diet and then enact the extremist army program through present governmental channels and thus preserve the facade of democratic institutions. Whether the majority of the reservists would line up behind such a program is unknown.

The army also finds support in the extreme Right wing of the civilian element in the empire. This is decidely a minority section of the Japanese public, but it is a very active minority. A few businessmen, principally those who profit from fat army or navy contracts, will be found in it. The self-convinced superpatriots are there, of course, In addition, some of the more unscrupulous figures in political life who are ager to snatch any opportunity to gain power are willing to sell themselves out to the army extremists, and a substantial section of the younger bureaucrats (corresponding to the military middle stratum) is genuinely converted to the military program.

New Tactics Now Being Tried Out.

THERE ARE indications that the army, finding itself unable to cope successfully with the House of Representatives, is altering its tactics to those first followed by the creator of the modern Japanese army, the late Field Marshal Aritomo Yamagata.

Prince Yamagata set about building up a place for the army in the Japanese state that would make it almost impregnable from attack by the political parties or any other element in the empire. Chief among these defenses is the imperial ordinance whereby the minister of war must be a lieutenant general or a full general on the active list. There are others, however, such as giving the war minister direct access to the throne, securing a prince of the blood as chief of staff, the provision that if the Diet refuse to pass the budget last year's budget automatically continues in force, the control of "secret" funds which at times are enormous, and still other measures.

In its insistent demand that there be a reorganization of the governmental structure, the army is now evidently following Prince Yamagata's precedent and hopes by this method to regain what it has lost through the Diet attacks. That is one string to its bow; the other is the fostering of the movement for a strong military Rightist pro-Fascist political party which will capture control of Parliament. But this move, the current electoral campaign has revealed, is not likely to succeed.

Shortly after the military insurrection last year there appeared in this correspondence the statement that the place of the army in the Japanese state was secure, given present world conditions and particularly the precarious situation in the Far East. Therefore, it was added, what becomes of most importance is to watch what type of thought and action dominates army circles.

That question is temporarily answered; it is the extremist type. The older and saner military heads have lost control of the radical middle stratum, or at least are not willing to risk putting their authority to the test. They are seeking to regain that control, which is what they mean by the "restoration of discipline." Simultaneously, the liberals and the party leaders are seeking to wrest all control of government, save technical defense of the empire, from the hands of the war office. The election of April 30 may only be a stage in that struggle for control rather than a deciding factor.

Bill Would Make Taxi Men Carry Liability Policies

A bill requiring all Washington cab owners to carry liability insurance will be introduced this week by Representative Millard (Republican), of New York, as the result of an accident in which six children from his district were injured.

The accident occurred six weeks ago when the children were sightseeing in the Capital with money they had been saving for four years. They were from Bedford Village, N. Y.

Returning to their hotel from the Library of Congress, the children took a cab. The driver, according to Millard, was rushing to beat a traffic light when his car was struck.

All six children were thrown through the top of the cab and had to be given hospital treatment. One is still at Emergency Hospital.

Although of poor parents, the children have been unable to collect any damages either from the driver or the owner of the cab, who had only a small equity in the vehicle.

Europe In Flux

By Barnet Nover

". . . The Heaviest Battalions."

GENEVA may, sooner or later, again become the center of international life, as it was for more than a decade after 1924. But it is far from being that now, as witnessed by the ceaseless rounds of visits being made by European statesmen to neighboring lands.

Within the past three weeks, not to go back any further, there have been the Schuschnigg-Mussolini exchange of views in Venice, the visit of President Benes of Czechoslovakia to Belgrade, the visit of Foreign Minister Beck of Poland to Bucharest and the gathering of the foreign ministers of the Scandinavian states and Finland at Helsingfors.

This week, Gen. Goering arrives in Rome and Anthony Eden pays a call on Premier Van Zeeland, of Belgium. Soon Carol of Rumania is to leave for Warsaw and Mussolini, it is rumored, may, for the first time since 1925, leave Italian territory. His destination, it is said, will be Berchtesgaden, Hitler's mountain retreat. Diplomacy has become peripatetic with a vengeance. But all roads no longer lead to Geneva as they used to. Far from it.

• • • •

FROM MORE than one point of view this is an unfortunate development. At Geneva it was possible for statesmen to confer by twos and in groups without having to do so under klieg lights. One council or assembly meeting made possible dozens of personal exchanges of views now to be achieved through a multiplication of visits each of which is certain to be regarded in neighboring lands with suspicion. The latter-day system of itinerant diplomacy has, on the whole, added little to Europe's appeasement and much to intensify existing fears and uncertainties.

It must be recognized, however, that these present-day diplomatic tete-a-tetes are the inevitable consequence of the breakdown of the collective system. With collective security in eclipse, the nations are frantically trying to make themselves safe against war without reference to the League. Even the most peace-loving among them are rearming at a break-neck pace.

Yet the feeling is widespread that no nation can, through its own unaided efforts, secure itself against attack or, should it be dragged into war willy-nilly, be certain of victory. At the same time, those states that believe they have something to gain from a disruption of the status quo are engaged in counter-efforts to break up existing alliances and isolate their potential foes.

Thus, in addition to rearming, the nations of Europe, with very few exceptions, such as perennially neutral Switzerland, are indulging at the moment in intense diplomatic activity.

• • • •

THE SUM TOTAL of all this activity has so far been, on the whole, negative. Germany's efforts to isolate Russia, France and Czechoslovakia have met with relatively little success. Italy's plan of making the "Berlin-Rome axis" the pivot of European diplomacy has also failed. Despite the Italo-Yugoslav treaty, Yugoslavia remains a member of the Little Entente, while Austria, Italy's erstwhile satellite, shows signs of breaking away from its present moorings.

Indeed, the permanence of the "Berlin-Rome axis" itself is very much open to question since, fundamentally, it can hardly be to Italy's advantage to have Germany grow more powerful.

On the other hand, the fact is indisputable that many of the seemingly permanent arrangements made by the status quo powers are none too firmly rooted. The French have not forgotten Poland's "extra dance" with Germany in 1934, and while the Franco-Polish alliance has been revivified, no French statesman can now take for granted that there will be no further relapse in Franco-Polish amity.

The example set by France's oldest post-war ally—Belgium—offers only too striking a commentary on the fragility of present-day alliances. Peace, like freedom, must be rewon in each generation or it may go by default.

• • • •

IN THE MIDST of all this prevailing uncertainty, however, one certainty is emerging and it is a fact of transcending importance in present-day Europe. That fact is the existence of a Franco-British alliance.

In 1914 such Franco-British co-operative effort in the event of the outbreak of a European war was implicit rather than explicit. There was no document in existence which formally bound Great Britain to come to the aid of France. There was only, as Sir Edward Grey told the House of Commons, a moral obligation on Britain's part to do so. That moral obligation was, as it proved, enough, although the French passed through some very anxious moments early in August while the British were deciding what to do.

Now, however, as a result of the smashing of the Locarno Treaty, Great Britain and France have definitely become allies. They have now formally agreed to defend each other's territory should either be attacked by a third power. Since, together, these nations command vast military and naval as well as financial and economic resources, it is not unlikely that, more and more, the Paris-London combination will exert a pull on European affairs greater than that exerted by any other combination.

This is a fact that will be lost sight of neither in Rome nor Berlin. It may draw these far from harmonious partners closer together. What is more likely, the weaker of these partners, Italy, may decide on a new about-face and make overtures to the Franco-British combination.

God, said Napoleon, whom Mussolini so much admires, is on the side of the heaviest battalions.

Slang And Cant

By William Lyon Phelps

Unconventional English.

Here is a new book everybody will want to own and all who can afford it should immediately buy. It is valuable and important as a work of reference, and it is dangerous to open at random, for it is so fascinating that you can hardly help reading it and missing whatever engagement was awaiting your attention.

This tall volume has exactly 999 pages, and is called "A Dictionary of Slang and of Unconventional English," is prepared by Eric Partridge and is published by the Macmillan Co., New York.

• • • •

The secondary title explains even more definitely its contents—"Slang—including the language of the underworld, Colloquialisms and Catch-Phrases, Solecisms and Catachreses, Nicknames, Vulgarisms, and Such Americanisms as have been naturalized."

I had to look up the word "Catachreses" and I think you will have to do the same—Webster has it.

The author says in his preface that on the preparation of this book "I have worked harder than (I hope, but would not swear) I shall ever work again."

• • • •

Slang and Cant take 44 per cent of the book and Colloquialisms 42 per cent; whereas Vulgarisms, by which is meant words and phrases that are in no way slangy, but are avoided in polite society, take only one-half of 1 per cent. Yet many will wish to know them in order to avoid them. "Contact" as a verb, for example.

It is interesting to see the history and origin of familiar slang words and to become acquainted with many unfamiliar ones, like tolly, poultry, knut. Slang is often so ephemeral that most of us can remember words that have disappeared; for example, "royal," very common in my youth, is not in this dictionary.

Yet it is decidedly up to date. See "Messolini." He has been called that since September, 1935. "In Australia he is Muss, while in the United States he is often called Muscle-inski."

Supreme Court Prepares Way For Early Test of Security Law

Jackson to Head Counsel.

Standing as the last piece of major New Deal legislation on which the Supreme Court has not yet passed, the social security act will be defended before the tribunal by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, assisted by the youthful Thomas H. Eliot, general counsel of the Social Security Board, and other government lawyers. Eliot, who is 30, was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court yesterday.

The court's decision in the Herndon case was the most important of the 15 written opinions which it handed down yesterday after returning from a two-week recess. The tribunal divided nve-to-four in overruling the Herndon conviction by Georgia courts, Justice Owen J. Roberts, speaking for the majority, which included Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Justices Louis D. Brandeis, Harlan F. Stone and Benjamin Cardoza. Justice Willis Van Devanter, speaking for himself and Justices James C. McReynolds, George Sutherland and Pierce Butler, delivered a dissenting opinion.

Sentenced to 18 Years.

The Herndon case, which has become a cause celebre, originated in 1932 when Herndon, an organizer for the Communist Party, was indicted for violating a statute of reconstruction days forbidding insurrection or inciting to insurrection against the State. The evidence against him was that he had undertaken to persuade colored people to join the Communist Party and that he had in his possession Communist literature. He was found guilty and sentenced to 18 years in the State courts.

The majority of the court held that the statute under which Herndon was convicted infringed his constitutional rights by placing "vague and indeterminate" limits on the right of freedom of speech and assembly. Justice Roberts pointed out the lack of any evidence that Herndon had undertaken to incite any forcible resistance to the State authorities or that he had even read the inflammatory Communist literature found in his possession.

"The power of a State to abridge freedom of speech and of assembly is the exception rather than the rule and the penalizing even of utterances of a defined character must find its justification in a reasonable apprehension of danger to organized government," Justice Roberts asserted in discussing the length which State legislatures may go in restricting seditious and radical movements.

Opnion Outlined.

"The judgment of the Legislature is not unfettered. The limitation upon individual liberty must have appropriate relation to the safety of the State. Legislation which goes beyond this need violates the principle of the Constitution. If, therefore, a State statute penalizes innocent participation in a meeting held with an innocent purpose merely because the meeting was held under the auspices of an organization membership in which, or the advocacy of whose principles, is also denounced as criminal, the law, so construed and applied, goes beyond the power to restrict abuses of freedom of speech and arbitrarily denies that freedom.

"And, where a statute is so vague and uncertain as to make criminal an utterance or an act which may be innocently said or done with no intent to induce resort to violence or on the other hand may be said or done with a purpose violently to subvert government, a conviction under such a law cannot be sustained."

Has Constitutional Right.

Passing on from these general observations, Justice Roberts asserted Herndon had "a constitutional right to address meetings and organize parties unless in so doing he violated some prohibition of a valid statute." He pointed out that the prohibition of which he was accused of violating provided that "any attempt, by persuasion or otherwise, to induce others to join in any combined resistance to the lawful authority of the State shall constitute an attempt to incite insurrection" and the latter was forbidden.

"If the evidence," Justice Roberts continued, "fails to show that he did so incite, then as applied to him, the statute unreasonably limits freedom of speech and freedom of assembly and violates the fourteenth amendment. We are of the opinion that the requisite proof is lacking."

He went on to point out that the crucial question was not the formal interpretation of the statute by the Georgia Supreme Court, but the application given to it and that "in its application the offense made criminal is that of soliciting members for a political party and conducting meetings of a local unit of a party when one of the doctrines of the party, established by reference to a document not shown to have been exhibited to anyone by the accused may be said to be ultimate resort to violence at some indefinite future time against organized government."

Void of Criminality.

He pointed out that the "only objectives appellant (Herndon) is proved t ohave urged are those having to do with unemployment and emergency relief which are void of criminality" and added that "his membership in the Communist Party and his solicitation of a few members wholly fails to establish an attempt to incite others to insurrection."

"The statute, as construed and applied in the appellant's trial," Justice Roberts asserted, "does not furnish a sufficiently ascertainable standard of guilt. The act does not prohibit incitement to violent interference with any given activity or operation of the State. By force of it, as construed, the judge and jury trying an alleged offender cannot appraise the circumstances and character of the defendant's utterances or activities as begetting a clear and present danger of forcible obstruction of a particular State function. Nor is any specified conduct or utterance of the accused made an offense.

"To be guilty under the law, as construed, a defendant need not advocate resort to ferce. He need not teach any particular doctrine to come within its purview. Indeed, he need not be active in the formation of a combination or group if he agitates for a change in the frame of government, however peaceful his own intent.

Termed "Dragnet."

"If by the exercise of prophesy, he can forecast that, as a result of a chain of causation, following his proposed action a group may arise at some future date which will resort to force, he is bound to make the prophecy and abstain, under pain of punishment, possibly of execution.

"Every person who attacks existing conditions, who agitates for a change in the form of government, must take the risk that if a jury should be of opinion he ought to have foreseen that his utterances might contribute in any measure to some future forcible resistance to the existing government he may be convicted of the offense of inciting insurrection.

"Proof that the accused in fact believed that his effort would cause a violent assault upon the State would not be necessary to conviction. It would be sufficient if the jury thought he reasonably might foretell that those he persuaded to join the party might, at some time in the indefinite future, resort to forcible resistance to government. The question thus proposed to a jury involves pure speculation as to future trends of thought and action."

In conclusion, the court held that "the statute, as construed and applied, amounts merely to a dragnet which may enmesh anyone who agitates for a change of government if a jury can be persuaded that he ought to have foreseen his words would have some effect in the future conduct of others."

Minority Opinion.

"No reasonably ascertainable standard of guilt is prescribed," the opinion added. "So vague and indeterminate are the boundaries thus set to the freedom of speech and assembly that the law necessarily violates the guarantees of liberty embodied in the fourteenth amendment."

Speaking for the dissenting minority, Justice Van DeVanter declared that the Georgia statute as construed and applied by that State's supreme court "prescribes a reasonably definite and ascertainable standard by which to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused and does not encroach on his right of freedom of speech or assembly."

He held it plainly appeared that Herndon's offense " was not that of advocating a change in the State government by lawful means, such as an orderly exertion of the elective franchise or of the power to amend the State constitution, but was that of attempting to induce and incite others to join in combined forcible resistance to the lawful authority of the State.

Speaking of the literature found in Herndon's possession—which, among other things, advocated racial equality—Justice Van DeVanter held that it reasonably could be inferred that he had distributed it.

"The purpose and probable effect of such literature, when under consideration in a prosecution like that against Herndon," he asserted, "are to be tested and determined with appropriate regard to the capacity and circumstances of those who are sought to be influenced. In this instance the literature is largely directed to a people whose past and present circumstances would lead them to give unusual credence to its inflaming and inciting features.

"And so it is that examination and consideration of the evidence convince me that the Supreme Court of the State applied the statute, conformably to its opinion, as making criminal an attempt to induce and incite others to join in combined forcible resistance to the lawful authority of the State.

The President did not explain his action, and Mitchell, while admitting he had expected the move, said he did not know of any particular specific speculation engaged in by any certain department.

The President's letter to Mitchell said:

"I believe it to be sound public policy of the Government that no officer or employe shall participate directly or indirectly in any transaction concerning the purchase or sale of corporate stocks or bonds or of commodities for speculative purposes, as distinguished from bona fide investment purposes.

"Engagement in such speculative activities by any officer or employe, whether under competitive civil service or not should be among the matters considered by heads of departments and establishments and by the commission in passing upon questions concerning his qualifications for retention or advancement.

"I would appreciate it if you would take steps to make this known throughout the Government service.'"

R. F. C. Has Rigid Rule.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has certain provisions in its law which work to the effect that the use of inside informtaion by its employes to make investments in securities is punishable by a $10,000 fine or five years in jail.

The Federal Trade Commission has no rules, on the theory that its employes never handle securities.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has rules growing out of the motor carrier act which prohibited members of the commission and its examiners from owning securities of motor and water carrier companies or of railroads. This has been amplified in practice to apply to all employes.

Secretaary of the Treasury Morgenthau, stating he did not know what rules applied to Treasury employes except that Internal Revenue Bureau agents who examine returns are barred from speculation, said:

"I take it for granted that all Treasury employes handling information do not speculate. The Treasury is run on an honor system, and you cant' lay down rules about this sort of thing.

"Honor Taken for Granted."

"Their honor is taken for granted, and we don't ask them whether they have speculated any more than whether they have brushed their teeth."

A reporter said that apparently the SEC ddi not take anything for granted with its hard-and-fast rules. Morgenthau insisted that while the Treasury would "comply" with any rules laid down, he did not know of a single case where an "important" employe in the Treasury had played the market. He added:

"The Treasurer and the Secretary of the Treasury are not allowed to own securities. But there are no rules here as to the other employes, any more than I lay down rules regulating my 14-year-old daughter."

There will be 825,000 employes of the Government, of whom 510,000 are in the classified civil service, plus 175,000 in the Army and Navy, affected by the ruling.

Agriculture Department employes operate under strict rules against dealing in commodities. Periodic crop forecasts are made by employes locked up in a room when they begin compiling the studies. They are not released until the results are announced.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Newly in Love With Classmate Who Has Long Been Her 'Pal,' Girl Asks How to Win His Heart.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have often read your good advice to othres, and now I would like you to help me. I am very much in love with a classmate whom I had always considered a pal until about three months ago, when I fell in love with him. For almost a year he has been crazy about a certain girl and, although others don't think so, I believe he is still in love with her. She has treated him terribly, and, while I don't think she cares a thing for him, she is jealous, knows he likes her and doesn't want anyone else to like him.

He told a mutual friend some time ago that he believed he was falling in love with me, but evidently he changed his mind, or else is trying not to. He first said I was too young, and then that I was in love with another boy. But now he knows differently. Every time I am with him or even near him I like him more and more.

* * * *

I sometimes feel that it is no use and try my hardest to forget him, but I just can't. I day-dream about him all the time and know I really like him. Now is my chance, so please tell me how I can make him feel differently toward me, instead of just a pal. I believe I can do it if I go at it right. Please answer as soon as possible. M. E.

* * * *

DEAR M. E.: There is no pat formula for winning a man's love. It's the sort of game which can only be coached play by play and from day to day, for one thing; and for another thing, what's one man's meat is very likely to be another man's poison in matters of feminine winsomeness and allure. You haven't told me much that would be of assistance in diagnosing and prescribing for this case.

* * * *

However, you should be able to profit by reviewing the history of your friendship with this boy point by point in an effort to discover just when and for what reason his incipient love for you began to fade. Perhaps it was just about the time you began to feel yourself in love with him and to show your feelings unmistakably. (And perhaps you promptly fell in love with him after hearing he had said he believed he was falling in love with you. In that case, your informant didn't render you a very helpful service.) If the foregoing surmise is true, it is logical to assume that his romantic fancy goes out to the personable girl who is indifferent rather than markedly receptive. The fact that he has continued to love the other girl for almost a year in spite of her "terrible" treatment of him lends support to such a supposition.

* * * *

It may have been your comradely attitude which warmed his heart in the first place; that, plus the notion he had that you were in love with someone else. Maybe you spoiled things by letting him know, even before he solicited such a declaration, that you were in love with him. If this should be true, the thing to do now is to play the role of comrade again. It may be necessary to pretend that you are now in love with someone else, that your love for him was a short-lived crush. If he has guessed your feeling, without quite knowing what he proposes to do about it, the idea that you are about to transfer your affections elsewhere, or have already done so, may cause him to see you in a new and more appreciative light. He may fall in love with you, in other words.

* * * *

Of course, he may be in just the right mood to be caught on the rebound, as it were. Sorely wounded by the other girl's treatment, he might almost at the drop of a hat give his whole devotion to some girl who had the courage to pursue him openly, and lavish on him admiration, appreciation, sympathy and love. However, very few girls can successfully play the aggressive role in courtship, I might add, and those who can usually don't need to ask others' advice on how to do it. Such girls usually play the game in such a way that, while the whole world may know they are pursuing a given man, he remains as innocent as a babe of what is going on. M. H.

Girl's Social Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 16, a junior in high school and I want you to help me make a decision. We moved to this country town three years ago and I have gone with none of the boys here, as I find it very difficult to be friendly with them. They don't want to mix. I play the piano, am good at games and cards, dance and enjoy clean movies.

* * * *

The junior-senior class dance is to be held in a few weeks. Mother insists that I go, but I have never danced with any of the boys who will be there and I won't go alone. What should I do?

* * * *

I met a boy who lives a few blocks from me; a nice boy from a good family (which, after all, is important) who is friendly and who doesn't drink or gamble. (I learned this from a friend who wouldn't lie to me; in fact, a distant relative to his.) I would like to invite him to my home. Would this be wrong? If not, how should I go about doing it? I don't want him to think I am running after him, but I do think it would be a chance to make new friends and I get very lonely at times. I hope you will advise me to the best of your ability. An early reply will be appreciated. Sincerely yours, PERPLEXED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Naturally you don't wish to go to the dance unaccompanied and you shouldn't. But there is a graceful and proper way around the situation—that leads to the dance, after all—if you care to take it. Steal a page from the notebook of metropolitan society girls who find themselves in the same dilemma and give a little supper party the evening of the dance, asking several couples and two or three unattached boys who are going "stag." If your class is a small one—say, no more than 10 or 12 members—you might ask the whole class. The party, as a matter of course, will go on to the dance as a group, and the boys in very courtesy to you, their supper hostess, will see that you do not lack for attention on the dance floor.

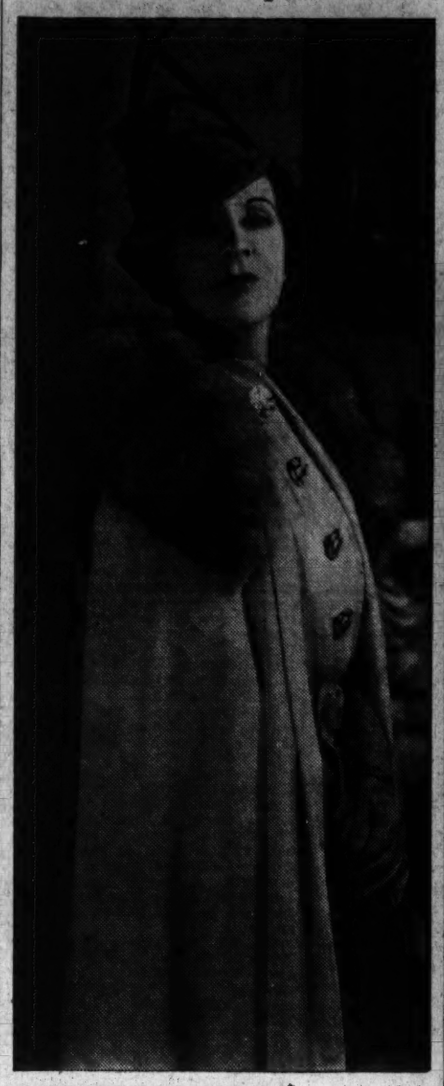
* * * *

Since your mother is eager for you to go to the dance, she should be more than willing to help you plan and give the party, and to see that you have a lovely outfit for the occasion. The supper might be served buffet style, to take care of odd numbers of boys and girls, and because it is more informal and more fun. Such a party would be an excellent opportunity for inviting the boy down the street into your home, if he is eligible to go to the dance. I would not advise your asking him over just to visit with you and meet your family. But it is perfectly correct to invite him to any parties you might be giving. If he isn't eligible to come to the class dance, give another party some evening and invite him to that.

* * * *

I believe you would find it comparatively easy to make friends if you were to become a young hostess locally renowned for the excellence of her parties. Nothing attracts the male of the species more readily than the prospect of free food and fun; and where the boys go, the girls are sure to trail along. M. H.

An Example and a Warning to Women



The beige crepe ensemble (left) worn by Jane Cowl in "First Lady" is the last word in sophisticated simplicity. The cape, cut on long lines, is trimmed with blue fox. The brown antelope hat has two coque feathers. Bag and gloves are brown suede. The dressy outfit, below, worn by Ethel Wilson in the role of a reform leader, is of brown crepe with gold lace.

Cheese Forges To Forefront As U. S. Food

Styles, However, Change as Lighter Snacks Gain Favor Here.

By Rebekah Blake.

DESSERT! Magical word always associated in childhood with huge saucers of ice cream, juicy apple pie and creamy chocolate cakes. But how styles do change. Now with established Sunday night suppers, midnight snacks and smart cocktail hours, desserts have advanced to the front rank in the march of food progress.

In noting the standard apple pie and ice cream ordered as the dessert course by many American friends, an English woman once voiced the opinion that "Americans simply don't know how to relax and enjoy their desserts. They usually are so heavy that it's a real task to consume them. Why don't they ever demand nuts, fruit, cheese and coffee?"

This suggestion is ideal, for with fruits and cheese come sociability and good digestion. Many American hostesses have acquired the continental custom of limiting their dessert course to a tray of mixed cheeses, fruit, wafers and coffee. These are easily arranged on the smart new cheese trays now being shown, and conveniently served in the same manner.

Experiments have proved that the merit of "end of the meal" consumption of cheese is as a stimulant and aid to the digestion of rich foods. When in itself both rich and old, it is efficacious in promoting the secretion of saliva and gastric juice. It is easily assimilated and neutralizes the acids of the stomach.

12 teaspoons Roquefort
Chopped pecans
Raw cream

Upon a bed of lettuce and endives place half pear and fill with mixture of Roquefort cheese, raw cream, a few drops of Worcestershire sauce, paprika and chopped pecans. Garnish top with red cherries. Serve French dressing with a little grenadine and whipped cream.

Cheese Ice Cream.

⅛ pound Roquefort cheese

Pound all together and press through a coarse sieve. Add salt, pepper and ½ tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce. Stir in ¼ cup of milk and freeze in an electric refrigerator tray, stirring occasionally while freezing.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Older Persons Aided.

The modern world is a much better place for older people, invalids and the disabled, than the old world. Dr. Walter B. Pitkin, the man who cheered us all up by announcing that life begins at 40, in his new book, "Careers After Forty," points out that there are three factors that operate to this end:

Scientists have devised (1) labor-saving machines, (2) sense-saving machines and (3) mind-saving machines.

The labor-saving devices have allowed men whose muscular strength is entirely inadequate, to work gainfully. An American workman today uses about one-tenth as much muscular energy on his job as did his grandfather. A cripple at a control board can manage all the machines on a ten-acre factory floor. This economy allows men of 40, 50 and 60 to continue at tasks which half a century ago could be managed only by youngsters of 20 or 30.

Sense-saving machines include better light and better sight. When Edison invented the incandescent electric bulb, the world was transformed. The amount that we see after sundown is incomparably greater than what our grandfathers saw. In fact, it would have surprised our grandfathers to think the time would come when people would see as well at night as in the daytime.

But even more scope in vision comes from the simple machine of eyeglasses. Samuel Pepys ended his diary in 1669 with a prayer that he would be able to bear the affliction of impending blindness with fortitude. He thought he was going blind, but, as a matter of fact, the only thing the matter with him was that he was getting on in life. He could now be made to see as well as ever with two diopters of lenses. Before the advent of scientific spectacle making, which was only a few decades ago, the period of dimness of vision disqualified many a man for his regular occupation.

Deafness has also been largely conquered by ear-saving devices. There is little that can be done for the deafness of middle life by treating the ears, but a great deal of comfort can be had out of the modern amplifiers. A partially deaf man can learn to tune a piano or a violin as well as a man with perfect ears.

Under the head of mind-saving devices, Dr. Pitkin points out that machines can complete in an hour mathematical calculations which the ten greatest mathematicians cannot complete in a year. There was first the simple adding machine, then the computing machine, and now a machine that finds the factors of numbers higher than 2,000,000.

The time may come when our bodies will actually be in the way.

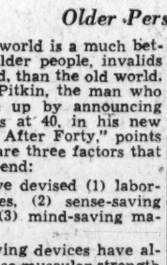
Roses for Your Garden

That obliging rose family! No matter where you live, some kind of rose—given only the slightest encouragement—will be your joyous companion.



Perhaps because of their aristocratic looks roses got the reputation for being choosy. Roses thrive from the Far North to the tropics. Some bloom in clayey soil, others in sand, still others in loam.

A bed of roses that like your climate is no more bother than a strip of lawn the same size. Your local park caretaker or nurseryman can tell you which varieties will be the most comfortable in your neighborhood.

April's the time to set out new ever-blooming ramblers with blooms of dazzling orange or saffron yellow to clothe an unsightly garage or twine round a garden arch. New hybrid tea roses of apricot brown or watermelon pink may encircle a bird bath or border your drive.

Before planting roses moisten roots in a bucket of water. Prune roots by making fresh cuts at the ends. Set in a hole deep and wide enough not to crowd roots. Pack soil tightly around them. Prune tops to within 6 inches of the ground.

Actress Exemplifies How Important Women Should Dress.

By Malvina Lindsay.

HOW to be important and not blatantly look it, is a problem that has long baffled the American woman.

Whether club leader or social bellwether, the temptation to overdress her part insidiously creeps upon her. If she is elected president of her civic club or poetry circle, she unconsciously begins to add pearl earrings and shoulder corsages to her ensemble. If her husband becomes mayor or bank president, she immediately feels an urge toward beads, flowered chiffons and mesh bags. In either case, she is in danger of eventually degenerating into a cartoon dowager.

Now comes Miss Cowl, one of America's foremost actresses, to make an esthetic contribution to the sartorial problems of women in public life. In her role as a social leader and wife of a high public official in "First Lady," which opened a return engagement here last night, Miss Cowl presents a perfect example of how a prominent woman should dress. And in the same play, Miss Ethel Wilson, in the role of Louella Mae Creevy, president of the Peace, Purity and Patriotism League, presents a horrible warning as to where lack of restraint in clothes may lead.

Clothes Up to the Minute.

Miss Cowl, always noted for her smart apparel, has given a great deal of time and study to the clothes problems of Lucy Chase Wayne, wife of the Secretary of State, in "First Lady." During the long run of the play, with the attendant changing seasons and style trends, Miss Cowl has had to do a Siamese-twin act in shopping. In order to maintain Lucy's reputation as the smartest dressed woman in Washington, Miss Cowl has had to shop not only with her own needs, but also Lucy's in mind. If she looked in a shop window, she had to think in terms not only of her own personal wardrobe, but of Lucy's. Since fashions change every few months for the really smart woman, Miss Cowl has had to change Lucy's entire wardrobe several times. Lucy is now appearing in a new spring outfit, complete in every detail, even her favorite hostess gown having been replaced with something more up to the minute.

In dressing Lucy, Miss Cowl also had to be careful not to overdo the smartness, not to make it overdaring. The hats she chose—high French ones, with coq feathers and pheasant quills—are sophisticated, yet also becoming and free from any freakish trends.

How to Wear Clothes

Her style formula for the social leader, the woman in public life—in fact, for any woman who wants to dress effectively, Miss Cowl states thus:

"Always select clothes that bring out your good points and conceal your poor ones. No matter how lovely a gown is in the shop window, never buy it unless it is your gown, one in which you feel at ease and which does for your figure and personality, the things a dress should do for them"

On the way a dress is worn—its wearer's grace and carriage of movement—depends a large part of its style, believes Miss Cowl. This beauty of motion she well illustrates herself—in the poise of her head, the grace of her hands, the sweep of her movements.

How would she advise other women to set about attaining it?

First of all, by beginning early in life to exercise—to dance, ride a bicycle—and then continuing to do these things in moderation through life.

"Exercise keeps the body supple," she says, "and there is no beauty of movement without suppleness. And, of course, don't let yourself get overweight."

However, for the woman who has let herself get stiff and heavy there is still hope, according to Miss Cowl.

"If that misfortune has descended on you," she says, "the movements of the hands and head, and even of the body may yet be rhythmic and pleasing."

Where movement is concerned, Miss Cowl points out, the important thing is to learn to think in curves, not angles. Women should learn how to stand, walk and sit, take lessons if necessary, and work with the aid of a large mirror. It is also important, she adds, for women, especially those in public life, to learn repose, to learn to sit or stand quietly relaxed, as nothing is more destructive to grace of appearance than nervous movements of the hands or any part of the body.

The "do's" of dress as illustrated by Miss Cowl's wardrobe as Lucy Chase Wayne, may be summarized as follows:

Miss Wilson, who in private life is slender and smart, manages in her role as a reform leader to suggest the opposite effect from Miss Cowl. Her wardrobe emphasizes dressiness and adornment. Every thing about her is a little wrong. Loose ends are jangling. Her hat is at the wrong angle. Her color combinations jar. She has too many beads and bangles, too much lace, too large and too many corsages.

And, of course, the manner in which she wears her elaborate ensembles is a direct command to all women with the weight of the world on their shoulders to hie themselves to a good dancing master.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, April 26.

ARLINGTON BRUGH'S mama passed through town, and we of the press gave her a good going over, you may be sure. For Arlington performs on the silver screen as Robert Taylor, the dream man of the hour, and we girls simply had to have the very lowest low-down to pass along to our customers.

ALICE HUGHES.

His mama was very nice about it, for Arlington is the apples of both her eyes, and she was pleasantly frank in telling us what her beautiful son is all about. Here are a few of the results of my own third degree, applied in Mrs. Ruth Brugh's suite at the Essex House, overlooking Central Park.

Arlington, or dear Robby, to keep the record straight, is a shy boy, on his mom's own word, and he will not give a blonde girl even a faint ogle if there is a small, pretty brunette within eyeshot. "Arlington's pet peeve," says Mrs. Ruth, "is having to listen to the chatter of a lot of girls saying nothing." Isn't this one of the outstanding victories ever scored by girls with sombre coloring? For once the blonde babes are retreating in dirorder. Barbara Stanwyck? "Very good friends," says Mother Brugh, "and I should be neither surprised nor displeased if he married her."

At table, says the wonder boy's mama, his tastes are simple. He likes a nice slab of steak, but baked beans are really his prime delight among the vittles. Here's the way she fixes them. Boils them 20 minutes with a sprinkle of salt and cane sugar. Drain, put the beans in a baking pot with a chunk of pork, half a cup of molasses, half a cup of catsup, two tablespoons of brown sugar. Bake "off and on" for two days. And that's the way to win your way into the heart of dear Robby Taylor. So start practicing on the beans, ladies!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One of the social hits of the day has been scored here by the young Countess de Chambrun, who is the worthy Josie Laval, daughter of the onetime French foreign minister. She's sharply witty and very intelligent, but overcomes these handicaps with some elegant duds, notably a black crepe from Schiaparelli which is trimmed with a half-dozen enormous white butterflies. She also sports long diamond eardrops. Some girl, this Josie! . . .

* * * *

Cecil Beaton, the English artist-photographer who spends much of each year in America snapping and drawing our big figures and figure-heads, writes from London that he has just been picturing the lively young Duke and Duchess of Kent. Maring, says Dear Cece, "wore red Greek draperies, but best of all a brown tulle crinoline ruched like a Queen Anne window-blind and a tulle coat covered with stars. She now wears her hair parted in the middle, but looks like Queen Alexandra." No feeble compliment, for Alexandra was a raving beauty . . .

* * * *

A new high for real-estate poetry was struck here a few days ago in a "personal" ad in the noble Times. It read: "We have a rippling brook for sale. A pretty cottage and lots of flowers go with it. Little money needed. Bethel, Conn." Guaranteed to drive city-dwelling country-lovers completely balmy, that bit! But believe me, that brook better ripple! One stutter out of the thing, and it's back to Manhattan I go!

* * * *

Tobe, the fashion consultant and style authority, is off for London and the coronation shambles, to keep an eye on the duds and to broadcast news to this country on the day of the great event. She'll cover the clothes angle from the viewpoint of the American woman. What an astounding dynamo Tobe, or Mrs. Davis, is! Not only does she service over 100 stores with style news, but she dabbles in radio work, thinks up newspaper syndicate ideas, and finds time to be a Number 1 hostess in her handsome duplex apartment on East Seventy-eighth street.

Plaids, Prints Rule Styles for Summer

Bold red and blue, black and green plaids on a ground of gossamer-sheet white chiffon predominated this week at a show of Mina Harris gowns at the Park Lane. Their skirts, when held out, measured yards around, but the silhouette from shoulder to hips was pencil-slim.

'Honest Sue' Dish Towels Fun To Use and Easy to Applique

By Alice Brooks.

DISHES fairly fly out of the pan and back to their shelves when dish towels are jolly and fun to use. These are, as you'll soon see, for "Honest Sue" is pretty as a picture in her poke-bonnet and hoop skirt. She's an easy one to applique, too, so out with needle, colored floss and a quantity of gay scraps. Outline stitch gives the patches a neat finish. If you prefer, you can omit the applique and do the motifs entirely in outline stitch. In pattern 5552 you will find a transfer pattern of seven motifs (one for each day of the week) averaging 5½x7 inches and applique pattern pieces; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Mrs. Harriman Is Guest Of Honor at Luncheon

Mrs. Carroll Miller Is Hostess for New Minister to Norway at Woman's National Democratic Club.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. Carroll Miller, National Democratic Committeewoman from Pennsylvania and sister of Senator Joseph Guffey, yesterday afternoon entertained at a luncheon in honor of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, newly appointed Minister to Norway. Mrs. Miller gave the party at the Woman's National Democratic Club, with members of the Women's National Democratic Committee or their representatives from 44 States as her guests.

The T-shaped table at which they were seated was like a garden, with large bouquets of pink and yellow snapdragons and Japanese iris down the centre, asparagus fern and little bouquets of pansies covering the white cloth and a corsage of flowers in shades of blue and yellow at the place of each guest. There were also little silver paper cutters, inscribed as souvenirs of the occasion, holding the place cards. Places of members of the National Committee, or their representatives, were designated by miniature flags of the United States, and those of former members by both our own and the Norwegian flags.

Former Members Present.

One of the former members of the committee was Mrs. Nellie Sullivan, deputy collector of internal revenue in Boston, who was the first woman from Massachusetts to serve on the National Committee. Another guest was Mrs. Rose Billington, the first woman from New Jersey to become a member of the National Committee, and still serving. Other members included Mrs. Clara Van Auken, of Michigan; Mrs. Douglas Brown, of West Virginia; Mrs. Samuel Connor, of Kentucky; Mrs. Marguerite Bodziak, of Delaware; Mrs. Robert C. Watts, of Virginia, and Mrs. Helen C. Donahue, of Maine.

Seated at the table with the hostess and the guests of honor were Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, wife of Senator McAdoo; Mrs. James P. Pope, wife of Senator Pope; Mrs. Billington, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint, and Mrs. Emily Newell Blair.

At the close of the luncheon Mrs. Miller introduced Mrs. Harriman, paying tribute to her long and loyal service to the Democratic Party and proposing a toast to her. Mrs. Harriman spoke briefly, expressing her pleasure at the prospect of representing this country in Norway, telling of some amusing letters from persons who desired to go along as her secretary, and describing the legation in Oslo. It is a handsome house, owned by the United States Government, she said, and has beautiful gardens with aisles of trees. A picture of the legation had been brought by Mrs. Miller for the guests to see.

Praised Mrs. Harriman.

Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Billington and others in the company were called on for short talks and all added their share of tribute to the newly named minister.

Mrs. Harriman extended an invitation to all of the guests at the luncheon to attend a tea at which she is enteraining this afternoon at her home on Foxhall road.

Among the guests were Mrs. George Dern, Mrs. Guy Gillette, wife of Senator Gillette, of Arkansas; Mrs. John R. Murdock, wife of Representative Murdock, of Arizona, who had spent the morning out in the rain—something so rare in her home in Arizona that in the 22 years she has lived there, she has never owned an umbrella; Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, wife of the Wisconsin Senator; Mrs. David Terry, wife of Representative Terry, of Arkansas; Mrs. Ollie James, who attended as the representative of Hawaii; Mrs. Wesley E. Disney, wife of Representative Disney, of Oklahoma, and Mrs. John J. Cochrane, wife of Representative Cochrane, of Missouri.

Admiral and Mme. Sable to Sail For France May 19 on the Normandie

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable will sail on May 18 on the Normandie for France. Rear Admiral Sable has been ordered to duty in Tunisia, on the northern coast of Africa.

The MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Two young Army officers going home to Fort Myer after a party the other evening decided then and there to see which of the two ways back to the post was the shorter. So off they started, one to go one way and his friend the other. So eager were they to have it over and done with that they failed utterly to watch their speedometers, and after them down Wisconsin avenue sped a policeman. I suppose he had visions of giving out two tickets at the same time—sort of a two birds with one stone affair—but that was not to be. Shorty after he joined the chase, the two officers came to the parting of the ways, where the real race began. The policeman paused, but ever so briefly, then took out after one and tagged him.

So that is why Jack (you supply the last names if you know them) won the race and George is still maintaining that the dispute is yet unanswered.

Martha Cammack is the most little-girlish-looking grownup we have seen. She wears her dark hair in a rather long bob, with very straight bangs framing her heart-shaped face. The other evening when we saw her out dancing she had a tall butterfly bow of black taffeta perched right smack on top of her head.

It takes more than a day at the office or a round of parties to tire Carol Mathis. She is one person in this world who has absolutely no regard for that low period of the day—just before lamplighter time. This we observed the other afternoon when we saw her in a smart black sports outfit, small brimmed felt hat pulled back on her fair hair, striding along through Farragut Square with two panting dogs at her heels.

The Warren Tydings (he is the nephew of Senator Tydings and she is the former Anna Marie Quick) are about to desert their apartment for a 22-room house out near Ferederick, Md. Anna Marie is busy making plans for her new home and, more than that, has the making of curtains for the whole house on her hands.

It looks very much as though there will be a complete turnover of naval aides at the White House. Every time you turn around you hear about another one being ordered elsewhere for duty. Now it seems that Tom Hederman will be leaving shortly for the staff of the commander of the destroyers' scouting force, there to assume his new duties as flag lieutenant.

Importance of Press Freedom Stressed To Clubs Federation by Felix Morley

Community Chest Aims Also Explained at Session.

Importance of preserving the American press as a safeguard for democracy was emphasized yesterday by Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, in a talk at the monthly meeting of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Discussing "The Press and Public Opinion," Morley pointed out that private ownership of newspapers had thus far kept the government from controlling the press in this country, despite obvious efforts to propagandize certain government agencies. In contrast, he mentioned that government subsidy had made freedom of the press a thing of the past in a number of European countries.

American newspapers could be improved with a higher type of personnel, the speaker said. "More reporters and editors with a wider background of training and keener discriminatory judgment is greatly needed," he declared. "Futhermore, we need a public opinion that is more critical, but constructively critical about newspapers," he went on.

In conclusion, he stressed the private ownership of the press—the insurance of freedom of the press—"has a pocket book nerve," and that public opinion can influence newspapers more effectively by proper pressure on that nerve.

Herbert L. Willett, director of the Community Chest, describing the purpose of this agency in a brief discussion before the federation, "The Chest belongs to the community and the community must realize that criticism leveled at the Chest is leveled at residents of the District," he said. "Too many persons are prone to think of it as an end in itself, instead of as an economic and efficient means to an end of caring for the sick and needy of the District."

The third speaker on the program, Mrs. William T. Bell, of Evanston, Ill., told of her experiences as a delegate of the national federation to the first World Peace Conference in Brussels last September.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District of Columbia Federation, was in charge of the meeting during the first half. Mrs. Ernest Daniel presided after Mrs. Biddle's departure for the national federation council meeting in Tulsa, Okla.

In the business session it was announced that the District of Columbia Federation of Clubs, with a membership of more than 5,000 women, had cast a majority vote against the President's Supreme Court plan. Last month ballots were sent out to the District of Columbia clubs in line with the Nation-wide poll of members of the general federation in regard to this subject. The rseult of the entire poll will be announced during the national council meeting, at which a vote will also be taken on a formal resolution to be presented to the council opposing the President's plan for reorganizing the judiciary.

Further business yesterday included an adoption of a resolution by the District of Columbia Federation recommending the abandonment of the projected site of the Tnomas Jefferson Memorial on the Tidal Basin.

Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, was the speaker at the spring rally of the Women's Democratic Club of Montgomery County at the Rockville courthouse last night. Mrs. Charles Y. Latimer presided.

Activities of the county group and plans for the future were outlined. The club will give a bridge party and fashion show next month.

The international relations committee of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase met at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church yesterday. Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire spoke on "Colonies: Do They Pay?"

Mrs. Frank M. Meloy, Mrs. James H. Defandorf, Mrs. Douglas Greisemer, Mrs. Benjamin H. Bennett, Mrs. Victoria Whitlock, Mrs. St. Clair T. Thomas, Mrs. Louis S. Murphy and Mrs. Edward L. Smead joined in a discussion ofter the talk.

C. of C. Banquet Speakers Laud Hull for Pacts

Trade Agreements Declared Aids to World Peace; Study Reported.

Secretary of State Hull's reciprocal trade agreement policy was loudly praised at the banquet last night of the American Section of the International Chamber of Commerce. At the same time speakers at the banquet took some of the credit for preparing the way for the policy and thereby contributing to world peace.

Threats of war played a prominent part in the discussions. John Foster Dulles, of the New York and Paris law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell, pictured the suppressed energies of some nations as threatening to overflow their national boundaries, and suggested the opening up of vast areas in the world through the mandate system to relieve the pressure.

Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Co. and chairman of the American committee of the international chamber, said that "the people of 50 different countries * * * have come to the conclusion that world peace must come through sound economics and the proper flow of trade across the borders of countries, thereby making it unnecessary for soldiers to march across those borders."

Co-operating in Study.

He said the international chamber is co-operating with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in a study of international economic reconstruction, "based on stabilization of currencies, revision of trade barriers, settlement of international debts on a basis fair to both debtor and creditor alike, an understanding as to armaments and the proper distribution of manufactured commodities, raw materials, food and clothing necesary to the well-being of the nations of the world."

Reporting the findings of 17 economic and monetary experts of the joint committee have received broad acceptance among international agencies, organizations and statesmen, he said the program will be continued.

Eliot Wadsworth, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and American vice president of the world body, declared the latter "is the only world organization where natoinals can met for self-expression, which has steadily gained in prestige."

"During this hectic period (since 1920)," he said, "we have tried economic conferences, disarmament conferences and political action through the League of Nations. These methods, tried by the test of constructive results, have been found wanting."

Chamber Prepared Way.

On the reciprocal trade policy he said:

"No one can say what turned the tide of American opinion from intense belief in high tariff protection to the present widespread belief in reciprocal trade agreements. To Secretary Hull must go great credit for his tenacious belief and arduous work. To the International Chamber, whose delegates have threshed this subject out at eight conventions must go the credit for preparing the way and operating with Secretary Hull."

Dulles pictured highly developed and industrialized countries feeling themselves encircled by hostile forces and needing an outlet for their activities. He proposed the opening up of sparsely settled territories, under the mandate system, and added:

"I do not suggest that re-allocation of colonies and the bartering of colonial peoples. To this there is serious objection. But there would seem to be no insuperable obstacle to opening up vast areas of the world through the application thereto of the mandate system as originally advocated by President Wilson—to the end that such territory should be administered in trust, first for the well-being of the local population, and then for the benefit and equal opportunity of the whole world."

Extemporaneously, Wallace said agricultural exports from this country had increased $35,000,000 during the last year, while imports were decreasing $130,000,000, and that droughts of recent years had been largely responsible for heavy importations of farm products.

Most nations, he said, have been faced with the problem of "getting rid of accumulated surplus agricultural products," and all realized balanced production was needed everywhere.

Flesh Is Exhibited At Denhardt Trial

By the Associated Press.

New Castle, Ky., April 26.—Pieces of flesh cut from the body of Verna Garr Taylor showing the bullet wounds that killed her were displayed in the Henry County courtroom today as the State endeavored to tighten its web of circumstantial evidence around portly Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, who is charged with shooting the pretty widow.

In a courtroom packed with spectators, Commonwealth's Attorney H. B. Kinsolving, jr., had Dr. John T. Walsh, of La Grange, who helped perform an autopsy on the body, display squares of flesh cut from Mrs. Taylor's left breast, where the bullet entered, and from her back, where it emerged. In the center of each piece were holes made by the fatal bullet.

Italian Schools Lauded by Suvich

The annual dinner meeting of the Harvard Club of Washington last night heard Signor Fulvio de Suvich, Italian Ambassador to the United States, extoll Italy as "the cradle of the modern university" and Italian schools as "among the most democratic in the world."

Reviewing the past history of Italian schools of learning, the Italian envoy stressed the fine balance in the Fascist corporate state between the old idea of autonomy in a university and the modern concept of state supervision which he termed "necessary."

Other speakers at the banquet, which was held at the Sulgrave Club, were George D. Birkhoff, president of the American Mathematical Society and member of the faculty at Harvard, and Ralph H. Hallett, vice president of the Associated Harvard Clubs.

national Chamber of Commerce, declared Secretary of State Hull's trade agreement policy "is a step toward sound, permanent trade relations, which is the only way to world peace," and Elliott Wadsworth, of Boston, said the International Chamber had prepared the way for such trade agreements.

Ernest G. Draper, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, suggested an act patterned after the railway labor act might help industrial concerns in adjusting labor disputes.

Earl Constantine, of the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers, said recent Supreme Court decisions "reflect the growing degree to which State lines * * * have vanished in the transaction of commerce."

Some Control Necessary.

E. L. Shaner, of Cleveland, editor of "Steel," said it is agreed that some control over the largest business concerns is necessary, but added that "in applying this control it should not be necessary to inflict unintended hardships upon smaller companies."

Chester addressed the national council meeting; Dulles, Watson and Wadsworth spoke at the banquet of the American section of the International Chamber, and Draper, Constantine and Shaner appeared before the American Trade Association executives.

Chester declared that business has moved "safely ahead at a rather rapid rate" in its human objectives and that business managements had "steadily grown in social consciousness."

"I for one am not ashamed of the record of business and industry," he said, "in the field of wages, hours and employe relations. Rather, I am proud to be associated with the vast number of honest, sincere, patriotic businessmen who have helped to bring about this progress."

Labor Has Benefited.

To refute the charge that "management has been and is in collusion with capital, and between them labor and the consumer have been deprived of their just share," he declared that "in 25 years, prices to consumers have come down greatly and quality of merchandise has gone up at an even greater rate. The hours of labor are shorter, pay is higher, and working conditions considerably better. And capital return has gone down. That does not look like collusion between industry and capital."

Conceding there are some wages so low and some working conditions so bad as to arouse "the indignation of all right-thinking people," he said that "industry itself has particular reason to condemn these things, for it is tarnished by them."

But he declared that "you and I know that businessmen generally deserve a decent place in public esteem."

He insisted that workers have been "the large gainers" from business and industrial progress. They have profited, he said, "with increased leisure for social and cultural recreation and with increased incomes."

Then he added that "from what I can see of the picture, management is going to devote even more thinking in the future to ways and means of providing the workers with better living," though he warned that "such planning, of course, is not going to be easy."

The manufacturers' leader pointed out that "our employes are our customers" and better wages for the "40,000,000 or more in employment" mean better returns for all industry and business, and he added:

"It just doesn't make sense when someone tries to maintain that industry is insincere, for instance, in its efforts to improve personnel relations, or to do the decent thing in collective bargaining."

He called on labor, whose cooperation is "eagerly welcomed," to visualize "a bit more the predicament facing management."

Urges "Attractive" Jobs.

He called on businessmen to set a goal "of making jobs in private industry so attractive and accessible that thousands now on relief will work in industry and in the various businesses and services."

Today's meetings open with a general session at 10 a. m., with President Harper Sibley addressing the membership on "Business Looking Ahead."

Harry A. Wheeler, first president of the chamber, in 1912, will speak on "The Sweep of 25 Years."

There will be five round-table luncheon conferences on:

The surtax on undistributed corporate earnings.

Current insurance problems.

Tonight, at 7 o'clock, there will be dinner meetings of the American Trade Association executives and the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries. These will be addressed, respectively, by George E. Sokolsky, of New York, and Sir Willmott Lewis, of Washington.

At some of these rodeos they've got out here, I've noticed that some of the finest trick riders and ropers are boys from the city who, up to a few years ago, had never got any closer to bronc-bustin' than pattin' a policeman's horse. Things that are strange to us today can become second nature to us tomorrow.

I had one uncle that came out here to visit me and I thought I'd give him a thrill by takin' him up in an airplane. He was a little bit excited leavin' the ground, but after while he calmed down and when I asked him how he felt he says, "I feel perfectly natural flyin' around up here." He said, "I wouldn't want'ta land at all if I wasn't gittin' kinda hungry." I says, "Well, Ive got a sandwich here," and he says, "No, I wouldn't want that." He says, "I'm gittin' an awful cravin' for worms and bird seed."

Cincinnati, April 26 (AP).—Mrs. Catherine Barrett Farnsworth filed suit today for divorce from John S. Farnsworth, former Navy officer now serving a 4-to-12-year prison term at Atlanta, Ga., on a charge of having sold naval secrets to the Japanese.

She said she married the former lieutenant commander in Covington, Ky., March 26, 1934.

D. C. Property, Telephone Slug Measures Pass

Level of Petit Larceny Is Raised to $50 by Bill in House.

The House yesterday passed without which clarifies the law relating to out debate two District bills, one of offenses against property and the other prohibiting the use of fraudulent tokens of slugs in pay telephone stations.

The purpose of the first bill, according to the House District Committee, which reported it, is twofold:

"First, to clarify existing law, relating to petit and grand larceny and similar crimes; and, secondly, to relieve the grand jury of consideration of many cases by providing through specific reference to the value of the property that many of such cases may be tried as misdemeanors in the police court."

The legislation raises the range in petit larceny to $50, although the United States attorney had recommended $75, from the present $35.

A report from the U. S. attorney's office explained that in many cases where the value of the property is doubtful grand juries will refuse to indict, "whereas if they were tried in the police court they would get some punishment as a misdemeanor."

The bill making it a crime to place slugs in telephone stations was requested by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., which told the District Committee that it loses thousands of dollars yearly from the fraudulent practice.

Penalties provided are fines up to $500 or imprisonment up to six months or both.

D.A.R. Delegate Missing Since Convention Here

Police said that Mrs. Steacy, who was attending the Daughters of the American Revolution congress here, failed to return to her home in York. She wast last seen, they said, on Friday in a downtown hotel.

Brilliant Show Opens Meeting Of 1812 Group

500 'Daughters' Present From All Over U. S.; Speaker Delayed.

With more than 500 delegates from all sections of the United States attending, the forty-fifth annual council of the United States Society, Daughters of 1812, opened with a brilliant display of color last night in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. Mrs. John Francis Weinmann, of Little Rock, Ark., presided at this opening session.

Flood prevented the arival in Washington of one of the principal speakers for the program last night. The airplane in which Dr. Earl E. Harper, president of Simpson College, was en route to Washington, was grounded by wind, rain and heavy fog at Philadelphia and arrived too late for his scheduled address.

The principal address of the evening was by H. L. Ponder, prominent Little Rock (Ark.) attorney and jurist. In his address, which was on "The Value of the War of 1812 to America." Ponder declared that the benefits and the value of this war to America were in the fact that there began, immediately at the conclusion of hostilities, the rise and development of a true national spirit and that State supremacy began to weaken, making way for the Federal Government. Before the war, he pointed out, State supremacy controlled and dominated everything throughout the States, with little respect given the Government in Washington.

"The War of 1812 made this Nation strong and great until today it has come to be the example and citadel of freedom," Mr. Ponder declared. "These liberties must be preserved against everything, and the Constitution and honor of this country must be saved for future generations."

Last night's opening ceremony was one of the most colorful in the history of the society. A parade of State flags which preceded the call to order by Mrs. John Francis Weinmann, retiring president national, lent an air of festivity to the scene. Pages were beautifully dressed in white satin with the names of their States on colored ribbons over their shoulders.

Miss Dorothea Lawrence, famed concert soprano and member of the Stephen Decatur Chapter of the Society at Plainfield, N. J., presented a series of four solos during the program, singing with a brilliance and spectacular delivery that led to the delegates' calling for encore after encore. Her program of songs included "Ah, Love But a Day," by Beach; "Deserted," McDonald; "The Moon Drops Low," by Cadman, and "The Call of the Maytime," by Brahe. Miss Lawrence is one of the first singers before a national convention who was also a member of the society.

After the calling of the council to order by Mrs. Weinmann last night the invocation was given by Mrs. Harper Donelson Sheppard, national chaplain.

James Roosevelt 'Outbantered' By Youth at Reynolds' Dinner

A Senate page boy, in his middle 'teens, last night out-bantered James Roosevelt, the President's son; inserted a discordant note in a Democratic love feast sponsored by Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina, for the 22 Senate pages, and will probably appear on the Senate floor this morning with two black eyes.

The page, Harry Burke, of New Hampshire, listened quietly as James Roosevelt laughingly asked him how it felt to live so near the two "foreign States, Maine and Vermont" and didn't he hope all 48 would be solidly Democratic by the time he is old enough to vote?

But Harry was unimpressed by the Rooseveltian banter, the dignity of the Senate dining room or the batteries of news reel cameras. He shook his head and quietly responded:

"I happen to be a Republican."

This was the only undemocratic note of the banquet. During the evening they heard themselves praised in a letter from President Roosevelt, congratulated by the President's eldest son and secretary and warmly welcomed by Senator Reynolds.

Somewhat taken aback by his first encounter with Harry Burke, James Roosevelt was asked to repeat the scene for other news reels. This time, he said, he would be sure to bring out the fact that young Burke was a Republican.

Later he admonished Burke's colleagues to keep an eye on him, and humorously suggested they "fix him up." "Next time," he concluded, "I'll make awfully sure which ones are Republicans and which are Democrats."

3 D. C. Tax Bills Will Go To Hill Today

New Measures Designed to Raise an Extra $3,300,000.

Increase Gasoline and Auto Costs; Levy on Insurance.

Three new tax bills, designed to raise $3,300,000 in additional revenue for the District, will be presented today by the Commissioners to the special tax sub-committee of the House District Committee.

These new bills, framed by the Commissioners, in co-operation with their special tax investigating committee, and providing taxes on auto weight, gasoline and insurance, were said to be "at substantial variance" with the auto weight, gasoline and insurance bills suggested several months ago by Representative Ross Collins.

Moreover, because these bills will raise only $3,300,000 further taxes, an additional $2,800,000 will be necessary. The Federal grant, this year, of $5,000,000, left the District's budget unbalanced to the extent of $6,100,000.

The sub-committee on District taxation today will investigate charges of J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance, that Washingtonians have been over-charged $10,000,000 within 12 years on fire insurance rates.

Asked to Name Remedy.

Amazed at this disclosure, made in a report to the House sub-committee on District appropriations, Chairman Kennedy of the legislative group, summoned Moor to explain what legislation he recommends to remedy the situation.

The Public Utilities Commission is expected to submit data on the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. so that members of the sub-committee can decide whether they believe a rate investigation is needed.

Members of Kennedy's sub-committee were responsible for striking out a rider in the District supply bill directing the commission to make the inquiry.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, told the sub-committee that the commission has ample authority to initiate such an inquiry whenever it sees fit without direction by Congress.

Plans All-Day Sessions.

Kennedy said the sub-committee will remain in session all day today, beginning at 10 a. m. and probably will meet all day tomorrow and Thursday.

The automobile weight tax, which will raise $1,500,000, provides rates as follows:

1. Passenger vehicles up to 3,500 pounds, $5; 3,500 to 4,500 pounds, $8, and over 4,500 pounds, $12.

2. Trucks are taxed from $15 to $150.

3. Motorcycles are taxed $5.

4. $25 for the first three sets of dealer's licenses; $5 for each additional set.

Though the above tax takes the place of the present $1 license fee, it does not alter the present personal property tax on automobiles.

The gasoline tax, which will yield $1,600,000, raises the present tax from 2 cents a gallon to 3 cents. Almost one-third of this yield, however, will be given over to the District's general fund.

The insurance bill, which will raise $200,000, provides a 1.5 per cent tax on policy and membership fees and net premium receipts. All insurance companies are included.

Useful Memorial Urged by Citizens

The Trinidad Citizens' Association last night adopted a resolution favoring the construction of a stadium, convention hall or bridge as the Thomas Jefferson Memorial. The association, meeting at Montello avenue and Neil street northeast, also indorsed the Sacks bill calling for daylight saving time here.

Other resolutions adopted at the meeting were a request to the Public Utilities Commission to investigate street cars on the H street line; opposed any reduction in the number of taxicabs in Washington; opposed the proposed weight tax on automobiles; favored restoration of an item for schools gardens in the appropriation bill and indorsed the request of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers of America for additional floor space in the Navy Yard for ordnance work, at a cost of $200,000, which would bring $800,000 additional work to the local yard.

Opposition to the proposed increase in the gasoline tax was voted last night by the Georgetown Citizens' Association. The association also opposed divergence of money realized from the gasoline tax into the District's general fund.

War Threat Fading in Europe, French Deputy Declares Here

Andre Philip, Also a Professor, Asserts Tension Is on Decline as Nations Recognize Bluff of Italy and Gain Respect With Arms.

Despite the feverish arms race, war clouds over Europe are diminishing, Andre Philip, professor in the University of Lyon and a member of the French Chamber of Deputies, said here yesterday. The trend now, he added, appears to be toward peace.

"Our really difficult period," Prof. Philip said, "was last August, just after the Spanish war started. If France had not then proposed the nonintervention pact, Europe, in my opinion, would have become embroiled in a major war.

"Since then many things have happened to make such a war less likely. England and France have become more closely united. Both these countries have increased their armaments, thereby winning increased respect from dictator countries.

Italy Loses Prestige.

"Meanwhile, European opinion of Italy—that is, of Italy's vaunted military strength—has been going down. For a while, Mussolini's defiant warnings to Great Britain had a lot of people fooled."

Prof. Philip, who is in the United States on a lecture tour, said that the civil war in Spain was—paradoxically though it might seem—likely to work against a major war.

"The big lesson of the Spanish war," he said, "has been that a quick, offensive war is hardly possible. If a country like Germany went to war, it would have to make a tremendous assault at the outset and win in a hurry. Germany's economic condition is such that it could not stand a prolonged war. The same is true of Italy.

Civil War Kills Theory.

"Well, the nearly year-old war in Spain has killed the theory of a quick offensive war. Franco has had the trained troops, the modern equipment. Yet forces made up largely of untrained fighters have held him off for nine months. It has again been made clear that it is easier to defend than to attack.

"I believe that any major war would last five years, and I believe further that the experts in dictator countries now realize this.

"Of course, we don't know what is going to come out of Spain in the end. I do feel, however, that in six or eight months the countries of Europe are going to be ready to join in a disarmament and economic conference. Such a conference would not be expedient now. But by next year England will have caught up in the armaments race, and, together with France, will be able to talk with more authority."

4 Incorporators, Under Fire by Stockholders, Withdraw Names.

An opening for business by June 1 was predicted yesterday for the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Washington, which yesterday received a charter as successor to the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association.

At the same time it was announced four members of the list of incorporators, who had been under fire from stockholders, had withdrawn their names from the list of new incorporators. Those who withdrew were Dr. R. W. Bonnett, Marcus Borchardt, John L. Fletcher and Harry L. Miller.

The charter was granted by the Federal Home Loan Bank board, which has fostered the reopening of the closed institution through a long series of surveys and inspections of accounts. Headquarters for the new institution will be at Winston-Salem, N. C.

New Board.

On the board of directors are William D. Jamieson, attorney; George L. Berry, Federal co-ordinator of industrial relations; Harry P. Somerville, manager of the Willard Hotel; Dr. Carl Henning, physician; Thomas Somerville, plumbing supplies; P. J. Schardt, Southern Railway executive, and Edwin Jacobson, builder.

The new board will elect officers and put up $20,000 capital in the new bank by subscription. Next the formality of proposing to buy shares of the old Fidelity from the United States Treasury will be made, which, if accepted, will be followed by an application to the courts by the present receiver for permission to sell.

Vigorous opposition to the four who withdrew was raised at a recent meeting of stockholders before the Federal Home Loan Board. Several stockholders demanded that a clean slate of directors and officers should take over the affairs of the bank.

Fine Gesture.

"The action of Messrs. Bonnett, Borchardt, Fletcher and Miller in withdrawing their names," said an F. H. L. B. spokesman, "was a fine gesture in the interest of harmony and one that should benefit all shareholders of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association."

The men who withdrew did so by resigning in a group, sending notice by a letter, which said in part:

"After many months of anxious work and conferences, during which we were determined to prevent the severe losses which would have occurred through liquidation, we are happy now to know definitely that our proposal to conserve the assets of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association through reorganization has been accepted.

"However, now that our proposal for reorganization has been definitely accepted and our interest and faith in the new institution has been clearly shown, we request that our names be not considered as members of the new board of directors."

Police Raid Store, Hold 4 in Lottery

Four men were charged with operating a lottery yesterday after police, led by Sergt. George C. Deyoe, of the vice squad, entered a cigar store in the 500 block Eighth street northwest.

At police headquarters the four gave their names as William Wallace Smith, 38, first block R street northeast; William Joseph Matera, 32, 200 block Fourth street southwest; Victor Bielaski Wheatley, 37, first block Myrtle street northeast, and Henry Carter, 40, Hotel Inn.

The men were taken before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage who set bonds at $1,500 each for a hearing May 3.

Mrs. Pell Will Speak.

Mrs. Sarah Thompson Pel, of New York City, chairman of the national council of the Woman's Party, will be guest speaker at a report and discussion dinner, to be held at 7 p. m. in the Olde Coach House Tea Room, 144 B street northeast. Laura Berrien, Washington attorney, will preside.

Defense Soon To Rest Case In Blackmail

Oklahoma Representative Admits Asking Proceedings Be Dropped.

Defense attorneys late yesterday indicated they would shortly close their case in the blackmail trial of Mrs. Mary Krieger and Samuel Frooks without placing Mrs. Krieger, mother of a pretty young daughter, on the stand in her own behalf.

Called as a character witness yesterday in District Court, Representative William Cartwright, Oklahoma Democrat, testified under cross-examination that he had asked the district attorney's office to drop the case because of his interest in Mrs. Krieger's family in Oklahoma.

Under further cross-questioning Cartwright said he had told U. S. Attorney Leslie C. Garnett he had heard that Mrs. Krieger's reputation was "not so good."

He had known Mrs. Krieger since she was a little girl in Oklahoma, Cartwright testified. He further said he had seen her numerous times since she became a teacher and added he always had felt she had an "excellent reputation."

He denied numerous statements attributed to him in the stenographic transcript of a conference he was said to have held with Pierce's attorney preceding his arrest last September.

This conference was overheard by prosecution and police officials by means of a dictaphone.

Alice Stoll Kidnaper Shifted to Alcatraz

Another underworld desperado, Thomas H. Robinson, jr., Stoll kidnaper, has been transported to the Government's "inescapable" prison, Alcatraz, the Department of Justice disclosed yesterday.

Robinson's transfer from Leavenworth, Kans., where he has served nearly a year of a life sentence for the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Stoll, wealthy Louisville society matron, in 1934, was made secretly last month.

Chamber Attacks High Relief Costs

The cost of relief was condemned by the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce, in session last night at Calvert Inn, in College Park, Md.

The chamber moved to have speakers from various relief agencies appear and address it.

William Stembler, of Capitol Heights, a businessman, said that one-third of his receipts went out again in taxes.

The chamber adopted a resolution condemning the gross receipts tax advocated by Gov. Nice as a substitute for the bookmakers' tax, and the 2 per cent consumers' tax, advocated by Attorney General Herbert O'Connor.

That pungent commentary upon official Washington life—especially as it is lived by the chatelains of the most influential households of the Capital—was presented again in the National Theater last night with Jane Cowl in the stellar role.

"First Lady" must inevitably recall some of the social feuds that have raged here during the past few recent Administrations, but it still is innocuous and delightful entertainment. Its humor is no more vicious than it is ineffective. There are laughs by the score as the three acts and four scenes progress and there is never a moment in all that time when even the most sensitive spectator feels that he is being subjected to a political vivisection.

It is a fortunate circumstance for the local theater that the same cast that presented the comedy here on an earlier occasion returns practically intact to do equal justice to parts that made this Sam H. Harris production one of the hits of its year in New York at the Music Box Theater. There is no recession from the standard of excellence maintained by the first presentation of the Katharine Dayton-George S. Kaufman comedy since it first rocked audiences by the audacity of its satire, at a time when the Congress of the United States was not in session. It should score a doubled and redoubled public reaction on the second visit.

Feminine Politicians.

The whole gist of the story, of course, is that the wife of a justice of the Supreme Court and the wife of the Secretary of State wage a war of wits as to which can wangle her deserving spouse into the White House at the next election. How it comes out you had better see for yourself.

Since she is a personal friend, there has always been a tinge of regret in this column's contemplation of "First Lady," that Lilly Cahill never has been seen in the National Capital as the bitter, but always smiling, social enemy of Lucy Chase Wayne, granddaughter of a former President, who had grown up in the Executive Mansion. This is pure carping, since Ann Mason does so brilliant a bit of work in the role that Miss Cahill created. Miss Mason is, at times, slightly too strident, it seems to me, to lend greateest effectiveness to her role, but she so completely encompasses the comic potentialities of the part that this is mere quibbling. She does a grand job.

So also, as goes without saying, does Jane Cowl in the triumphant half of the wangle. As the wife of the Secretary of State, Miss Cowl reveals again that superb voice, all of the social niceties and the dramatic fervor of a comedienne whose talents have meant so much to the American theater. She is, as always, superbly gowned, perfectly coiffured and impeccably the lady of large estate who lends this sort of thing a complete and immensely amusing authenticity.

Cast Remains Intact.

The supporting members of the cast are about as they were when the play last was seen here on the stage. Sophie Prescott, the secretary, is played with consummate skill by Diantha Pattison; Helen Brooks, with the quaint and utterly attractive Southern drawl, still is the ingenue, who gets her Senator in the end; Hunter Gardner, assumes the role of Stephen Wayne, the Secretary of State; Carrie Reynolds continues as Belle Hardwick, wife of the Senator still played by Thomas Findley.

Florenz Ames seemed to these eyes and ears last evening a little more subdued than in his earlier portrayal of the role of Ellsworth T. Ganning, a nationally known newspaper publisher, but perhaps that was merely imagination. Mrs. Creevey, who has all of the women in the country behind her—how far behind is not divulged—still is done full justice by Ethel Wilson, who contributes greatly to the sum total of the play's climacteric effect. Judson Laire is a commendable, and handsome, Senator Keane, and Oswald Yorke, as Miss Mason's phlegmatic Supreme Court husband, repeats his fine work in a role that has an important bearing on the motivation of the almost farcical sequence of events Miss Dayton and Mr. Kaufman have evolved.

The others in the cast do their full share toward making this one of the prize exhibits of the current theatrical season; one not to be missed by any ardent lover of the best the playhouse has to offer in the way of articulate and incisive comedy.

Dealer Challenges Two-Man Control Of Liquor Board

The right of two members of the three-man board of the District Alcohol Beverage Board to control the destinies of the group while a third is seriously ill for a period of time was challenged in District Court yesterday by Albert Fingerhut, who operates a liquor store at 1532 Seventh street northwest.

Fingerhut said he had petitioned the board to permit him to move his license to 1504 Seventh street northwest. His request was denied.

Yesterday he demanded that District Court rule that a two-man board be held incapable of operating the board, as the law creating it specifically designated three members and made no provision for only two members.

The Warner Brothers Once More Announce Long List Of Their "Best Pictures," Simultaneously "In Work"

Seven Films Are Now in the Making on West Coast, Enlisting Best Acting Talent Burbank Can Boast; That Preview Business Is Straightened Out; Miss Cornell in Philadelphia Week of May 10; Bombing of Madrid to Be Shown at Pierce Hall; Notes.

BELL.

THIS is getting just a little monotonous.

Almost every Monday morning there reposes on my desk a screed from the Warner Brothers executive offices in Washington stating, in effect, that the Warner Brothers have more important pictures at work at the same time than ever before, according to a report received from the West Coast by local Zone Manager John J. Payette.

The disturbing part of the whole business is that all of the vagrant rumors eventually turn out to be approximately true.

At the moment, for example, Bette Davis is working in "That Certain Woman," in which she appears with Henry Fonda, Ian Hunter and Margaret Lindsay. This film is being directed by that virtual tyro, Edmund Goulding, who heretofore has made only such things as "Grand Hotel" and "Rip Tide."

Marion Davies, Robert Montgomery, Patsy Kelly and Louise Fazenda, that engaging fellow-Hoosier from LaFayette, Ind., are making "Ever Since Eve," under the direction of Lloyd Bacon, whose most recent film was "Marked Woman."

Mervyn LeRoy's second independent production, "The Deep South," is nearing completion with Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson and Edward Norris in the principal roles of the film transcription of Ward Greene's best-selling novel.

Paul Muni's "The Life of Zola," directed by William Dieterle—the star-director combination that was responsible for the huge success of the Academy prize-winner, "The Life of Louis Pasteur"—has Gale Sondergaard, Joseph Schildkraut and Gloria Holden in its supporting cast, and Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell are teamed in "Angle Shooter," a newspaper story by Adela Rogers St. John.

One of the newest, and reputedly biggest, productions on the Warner lot is "Variety Show," with Dick Powell, Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians, Rosemary and Priscilla Lane, long associated with the Waring band; Lee Dixon and Ted Healy, under the direction of William Keighly, with Busby Berkeley supervising the musical numbers.

When completed and released, these productions will be seen first in Washington on the screens of the Earle and Metropolitan theaters—something that you may already have suspected.

* * * *

Well, it seems that these things always straighten themselves out. Instead of two screenings today at 1:30 o'clock there will be only one. The Loew interests will unspool "Wake Up and Live" for the drama desks today, in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, and tomorrow at the same hour the Warners will unwind "Mountain Justice," a screen drama based on a case that has occupied front-page space for a long time now.

"Wake Up and Live" is the picture that enlists the belligerent services of Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie, in addition to a long cast of actors!

It will be a pleasure to be able to report here in a day or so upon both of these, instead of only one. It pays to advertise!

* * * *

Not all of the directors of our major productions on the stages of the living theater seem to encounter the difficulty once expressed to this reporter by Max Gordon that casting a large number of plays with a preconception of bringing back "the road" in this day and age virtually is impossible.

It was Mr. Gordon's view that casting a sufficient number of "road shows" to insure a 30 or 40 week season necessarily would denude Hollywood of every vestige of its acting talent. The argument seemed a potent one at the time—when he was staging "Pride and Prejudice" here before it went into New York. Now there comes to hand a bit of tangible evidence to the contrary.

There are, it seems, 959 actors on Guthrie McClintic's casting list, composed of 33 male and 27 feminine stars; 51 male and 46 feminine featured players; 196 juveniles, 162 ingenues, 141 character women, 261 character men, 15 Negro actors and 17 child players.

As there are somewhere in the neighborhood of 8,000 members of Actors Equity Association, this roll naturally is incomplete, but, more or less, it is a record of the players most in demand on the American stage and evidence that there are still available large numbers of accomplished people of the theater, if one is of a mind to hunt them out.

So there comes a cordial note from Horace Heidt, whose band is making musical history on the stage of the Earle Theater this week, in which he promises the meeting between us that has not as yet occurred on his present visit to the National Capital, due largely to the remissness of this department. It will be a genuine pleasure to renew an acquaintanceship that has entailed intermittent correspondence from all points in the United States, most of the capitals of Europe and that cosmopolitan capital of Monaco, Monte Carlo, where Horace and his boys played one of their most successful engagements a few years back. But I shall still miss Lobo, the police dog that looked like a wolf and acted like a gentleman.

* * * *

If anyone missed Katharine Cornell's performance in the role of Oparre in Maxwell Anderson's play of "The Wingless Victory," at the National earlier in the season, or cares to make a short trek to see her interpretation of George Bernard Shaw's comedy of "Candida," that opportunity will be afforded in Philadelphia, at the Forrest Theater, the week of May 10.

Miss Cornell will close her New York season on May 8 and after Philadelphia will appear in Boston and Chicago on a brief spring tour.

* * * *

The American Friends of Spanish Democracy will show "Madrid Document," a film play of the bombardment of Madrid, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, tomorrow and Thursday. Performances will be at 4:30, 7:30 and 9 p. m., on Wednesday, and at 4:30 on Thursday. The admission charge will be 15 cents for students.

How do you like it on Mount Ararat?

Heat Overproduction Penalty Of Excess Fat, Scientists Learn

Some of America's most famous scientists listened intently yesterday to the story of the fat goose and the skinny goose, the fat mouse and the skinny mouse.

Their tale came not from Aesop nor Mother Goose nor Grimm, but twixt the scholarly lips of Francis G. Benedict and Robert C. Lee, who were telling the National Academy of Sciences of their latest experiment.

Working with geese and mice, the nutrition experts of the Carnegie Institution of Washington discovered that the fatter the animal, the more heat it produced.

The dramatis personae of their investigations consisted of geese weighing from 4.5 to 7.5 kilograms, a 20-gram albino mouse, a 60-gram fat mouse and an 8-gram dwarf mouse.

"That body fat increases the energy production is undeniable," Benedict and Lee concluded. "The obese must pay in calories for their fat loads."

Sugar is an effective brake against alcoholic intoxication, the opening session of the academy's annual meeting was informed by Dr. Howard W. Haggard, author of popular books on medicine, and his Yale colleague, Leon A. Greenberg.

"Our investigation has been made chiefly on rats but we have evidence that men react similarly," they said.

Their findings, in substance, were that the toxicity of alcohol is influenced inversely by the amount of sugar in the blood. In other words, the greater your stock of sugar, the longer it will take you to get drunk.

Testes were made with highly purified grain alcohol, commercial spirits and the alcohol of various whiskies.

How the human body manufactures hemoglobin, the red color of the blood, was described by G. H. Whipple, of the University of Rochester Medical School.

When the red blood cells wear out in the circulation they disintegrate, the hemoglobin breaking down into iron, a pigment radicle and the protein part. The iron is stored for future use and the pigment radicle is thrown off into the bile. Little is definitely known as to the disposition of the protein part.

The liver and bone marrow are the chief agencies for production of new rod cells and hemoglobin, said Whipple.

"We may imagine that the liver produces the building blocks or chemical aggregates and the bone marrow acts as the 'assembly line' from which roll the finished red cells packed with hemoglobin," he said.

He emphasized the importance of diet in hemoglobin production. At the top of the list, he said, are animal viscera—liver, kidney, pancreas and stomach. At the bottom are dairy products and grains. Green vegetables are in a midposition. Some fruits, such as apricots, prunes and peaches, promote production while others, notably berries, are inert.

Leaders to Pledge Support for Drive

Prominent Jews of Washington tonight will pledge their support to the United Jewish Appeal at a dinner at the Woodmont Country Club.

While the $80,000 drive will not open officially until next week the dinner tonight will indicate to a large extent the success of this year's campaign to help destitute Jews of other lands crushed by economic conditions and anti-Semitism.

Dr. Abram Simon, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; Edmund I. Kaufmann, Morris Cafritz and others will speak on the plight of the Jews of Poland and Germany. Isidore Hershfield will tell of what is being done to provide a home for thousands of refugees in Palestine.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, April 26.—Memories that bless and burn: When Tom Mix erected an electric sign with 10-foot letters on his house top to blaze his name in lights.

When mamma stopped daughter Anita Louise from crying (she was then a child actress) by holding a mirror up so she could see the horrible faces she made. When Pola Negri sent a parfumer with 167 odors to Rudolph Valentino so that Rudy might select the aroma he liked best—the one she wore for him thereafter.

HARLOW.

When Glenda Farrell first learned that her son, Tommy, was asking every gentleman caller if he "really intended to marry mother." When Jean Harlow, making her first personal appearance in connection with the air epic, "Hell's Angels," crashed in a plane, then tore her clothes to shreds struggling through underbrush to a highway. When Lee Tracy took violent dislike to an ash tray in his apartment, fired five shots at it, and was arrested for disturbing the peace.

When Lawrence Tibbett went broke in Mexico and tried to earn carfare home by singing in barrooms, but could not raise a dime. When Jeannette MacDonald bragged to newspapers about her new watchdog, and that night was robbed without the mutt woofing one woof. When Jimmy Cagney opened a dancing school in Hollywood (he was an out-of-work vaudeville hoofer at the time). When Chester Morris was so bad in his first picture that he packed up to sneak back to New York.

Wynne Gibson tells this story of the time William Gargan brought his young son on a set. It was the day Bill was to stage a rough-and-tumble fight. Wynne held the boy on her lap, fearing he might be frightened at the sight of his father in a fist fight. But to her amazement, young Gargan was more interested in the electricians working on high overhead than in his dad's scrapping before the camera. She asked him why. "Aw, that fight's no good," the boy sneered, "Pop's pulling his punches!"

A writer told me of this harrowing experience, which I have long expected to happen, but never heard of it happening before. He went to a merry Hollywood party at which guests included the widow of an airplane pilot killed in an Idaho crash. While the party was its gayest, someone turned on the radio, and at that precise moment one of those news dramatizations was in progress.

This particular enactment was of the Idaho crash, and the radio actors played each harrowing step, including removal of the pilot's body from the debris. Throughout, the entire party sat stunned and motionless, while the widow listened to the account with her head in her hands. If anyone thought of shutting off the radio, nobody had the courage to do so. At the program's end, the woman arose without a word and took her departure.

Most American-made pictures are dubbed for foreign release—that is, new sound tracks are made with unseen actors reading lines in other tongues. Some attempt is made to match the syllables with the original English, which is quite an art.

Now comes France to demand full program credit for native actors who double the voices of American stars. This may prove to be complicated. Imagine, for example, this billing for "Go West, Young Man;" "Voice by Ninl Chavier. Face and hips by Mae West."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Drawing the Sting of a Side Entry.

It is a very bad general who does not change his tactics in the light of unexpected developments. A declarer may form a perfectly sound plan of attack at the outset, but it does not follow that this plan must be adhered to regardless of the tide of battle. The hand described below was one that required emergency measures.

	♠ A 6 ♡ K 4 3 2 ◇ K 10 6 5 4 ♣ 6 5
♠ K J 10 9 3 ♡ A J 9 5 ◇ — ♣ J 9 4 3	North West East South	♠ 8 4 ♡ 10 8 7 ◇ J 9 8 7 ♣ Q 10 8 2
	♠ Q 7 5 2 ♡ Q 6 ◇ A Q 8 2 ♣ A K 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♠	3 ◇	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's bid was too strong, considering that it was made over an intervening bid—two diamonds would have been ample as a free raise. At any rate, the final contract was correct.

West opened the Jack of spades, dummy ducked, and declarer won with the Queen. A count of tricks made the contract appear a laydown, but, when South cashed the diamond Ace and discovered that East had a sure diamond stopper, he saw danger ahead. To clear dummy's fifth diamond would require giving East the lead, and a spade return would establish West's suit. Then, if West held the heart Ace, which his bid indicated, he would jump on the first heart lead and probably run off three spade tricks.

Having seen the danger, declarer promptly advanced to offset it. Instead of clearing the diamond suit, he attacked West's probable entry card (the heart Ace) by laying down the heart Queen. For West to refuse this trick would be fatal; declarer having brought home a heart would shift right back to diamonds. West, therefore, won, and, hoping that East had started with three spades, cleared his spade suit.

Now declarer could go about establishing diamonds without fear. If East had another spade, then West could have started with only four, of which he would make but two. The contract, of course, became a laydown.

WHEN BROCK PEMBERTON was casting "Personal Appearance," he offered a job to Ed McNamara, who spurned it to take a role in Sinclair Lews' "Jayhawker"—which ran three weeks, while "Personal Appearance" ran more than a year. Pemberton, in publicizing his play, ran quotes including this one: "Even I liked it—Ed McNamara." He even inserted Personals in the Times, reading: "Ed: Come around to see me, I'll be here for a long time—B." . . . McNamara returned from Hollywood last week, and learned that Pemberton produced three plays this season— all flops. That's why the Personal columns of late have included ads reading: "B.: Been looking for you everywhere, but can't find you—ED.!"

EDGAR LESLIE, author of "Moon Over Miami," will be honored by the citizens of Miami in appreciation for his having written that song. "That's silly," Leslie is now explaining. "The only reason I made it 'Moon Over Miami' was because it just happened to sing better than 'Moon Over Kaluah.'" . . . The longest jam session on record was held at the Onyx. Stuff Smith's boys swung it for 1 hour and 14 minutes straight . . . Solen Burry, of "Having Wonderful Time," is doubling at Minsky's, getting $15 a show there. His book, "Lay-Off," will be published by Simon & Schuster soon . . . When Burry was told that the cast was taking instructions from Benno Schneider and Arnold Korff the comic examined their scripts and criticized: "Nuts! It's written too close to the page!"

GEORGE ABBOTT has prohibited the cast of "Brother Rat" to play their radios backstage on Wednesday nights . . . One of the cues in the play is a bugle call, and no difficulties have been experienced, except on Wednesday nights. Abbott investigated and finally learned the reason. Fred Allen, broadcasting Wednesday nights, uses bugle calls as part of his program. And the cast has been mistaking these for the cue to rush onstage.

WHILE JOHN GOLDEN'S new play, "Susan and God," was being tried out at the Forrest Theater in Philadelphia last week the players discovered that a featured actor was susceptible to feminine flattery. The next day he received a typical fan letter from a young lady describing herself as a Philadelphia debutante, who pleaded: "I'll be at the Ritz bar tomorrow at 3." . . . At 2 o'clock the actor attired himself in finery, prepared to sally forth for conquest—when a phone call summoned him back to the theater for rehearsals . . . He's still fuming and still unaware that the "debutante's" note was written by the playful Gertrude Lawrence and that the phone call came from the equally playful Rachel Crothers.

Douglas Perry, the 7-year-old lad who portrays Beauregard Calhoun in "Babes in Arms," has a genuine crush on Mitzi Green. He actually hangs up on phone callers who want to date her. The youngster even wanted to send Mitzi a silver fox cape—but his mother convinced him that such a gift would be too expensive. So he sent her—a box of candy!

GEORGE TOBIAS, of "You Can't Take It With You," will be cast for the coveted role of Lennie, in the Kaufman-Steinback adaptation of "Of Mice and Men," which Sam Harris will produce in the fall . . . Ruby Newman's band will return to the Rainbow Room in October . . . Ivy Dale, of Ed Smalle's Seven G's, sings the role of Serbert in the opera "Faust" at the Hippodrom tonight . . . Marty May and his fiancee, Alice Wallace, who was Tommy Manville's girl, dined at the Manville home Wednesday night, and invited Tommy to be their best man when they're wed May 19!

LAST WEEK-END, Rex Cole was at a party, seated himself near the radio and chuckled in great amusement at a radio program called "Professor Quiz." He laughed uproariously—until the commercial announcement was made—looked around him and retired quietly . . . The announcement described the sponsor's wares—Kelvinator—Cole's rival product.

TOBY FREEDMAN, son of the late David Freedman, was one of those screen-tested for the title role in the forthcoming film, "Tom Sawyer." . . . The screen talent scouts also have become interested in Alice Dawn . . . The dusky Giants of Rhythm, who entertain at the Cotton Club, asked to speak to the press agent there. Harry Sobol, who publicized that cafe, went backstage and introduced himself. "Are you the press agent here?" their leader asked. Sobol nodded—and they placed a package into his arms. "Here, then," they directed, "bring these pants back in a half hour—pressed!"

Boston's Bronx Cheers Are Getting Louder

By Shirley Povich.

Boston, Mass., April 26.

The transformation in Boston fandom has been one of the American League's queerest developments in recent years. Here in the Hub where visiting clubs always got a fair shake from the fans and the razzberry was never in season, matters have come to a strange pass ever since Tom Yawkey endowed the Red Sox with his riches.

POVICH.

The boo is heard with increasing frequency at Fenway Park and grounds, even the home team isn't exempt from the Bronx aria. Before Yawkey took over the Red Sox, Boston clubs were always poor and the fans were proud of 'em. But riches have brought discontent to Fenway Park inhabitants. Time was when the Red Sox were always forgiven for their sins. They had but to put up a gallant fight and Boston fans made allowances for their shortcomings. Boston teams, operating on the proverbial shoestring, lacking both front office cash and talented playing flesh, were not supposed to win and Boston fans were tolerant.

But Yawkey, with his money, with his purchases of the league's greatest stars, a few years ago whipped Boston fans into a frenzy of pennant hope. And when Boston's seeming pennant contenders did not jell at all and finished low in the second division, the fans turned on 'em.

Even Cronin Got It

First they took to booing the visiting clubs, then as disappointment followed disappointment with the Red Sox, the fans went native. Down upon the ears of Boston players crashed first scattered and then a concerted chorus of razzberries. It was incredible, but true. Boston fans had changed.

It couldn't happen in Boston, but it did. Joe Cronin had been a natural in the Hub. He had been a great player at Washington and he was Irish. That counted for a lot here in this transplanted bit of the ould sod, where a ball player had but to be Irish to win the acclaim of Boston fans. Yet Cronin, above all other Red Sox players, was booed the most viciously.

The metamorphosis in Boston fandom reached completeness one day last summer. Cronin was having a bad day in the field and the league standing showed the Red Sox far out of the pennant race. The boos that greeted the young Irishman's appearance at the plate on one occasion were so long and vociferous that Mrs. Cronin sitting near the Boston dugout, left the park in tears.

Objective Journalism

But Boston newspapers have not been infected with the change that has come over the fans. Boston baseball writers are still the most loyal home-town scriveners in the league and the Red Sox, in their reports, can do no wrong.

Typical was one account in a morning newspaper today after the Red Sox had taken a horrible licking from the Yankees. It was noted simply that "The Red Sox were not in a scoring mood today." If they had been, well, things doubtless would have been different, I suppose.

One write-up of a ball game at Fenway Park will always be classical. It was a long essay on a Washington-Red Sox game in 1920. The reader was forced to wade through approximately 200 words of praise for some Boston pitcher whose name escapes me at the moment. This pitcher, according to the story, was pitching in awful tough luck and eventually lost the ball game, 1 to 0, it was learned.

The reason he lost the ball game it was later developed, if the reader hadn't lost interest, was because a fellow named Walter Johnson had pitched the only no-hit game of his career.

A Story Is Revealed

The details of the trade which sent Al Simmons from the White Sox to the Tigers in the winter of 1935-36 were revealed today by Bill Cunningham and affirmed by Simmons, himself.

Despite the Chicago fans' sourness toward Simmons, who had a poor season with the White Sox, Lou Comiskey, Chicago owner, still had a great affection for the Milwaukee Pole.

"I know that," said Simmons.

"And I want you to know that I don't blame you," said Comiskey. "I still think you're a great ballplayer, but luck seems to be against us."

"You've got a great reputation still, and I think I've got a chance to save it for you," Comiskey told him. "We've been approached by two clubs who want to buy you for plenty of cash. One is Detroit and the other is New York. I might as well tell you, Mickey Cochrane, your old pal, has offered $75,000 for you and the Yanks are offering $60,000.

"I want you to get a break out of this somehow. Now you just forget the prices and tell me whether you'd rather go to the Tigers or Yanks."

Simmons said that was darned decent, all right, and to make it the Tigers. He wanted Comiskey to get that extra $15,000.

Harvard Netmen Lose.

Cambridge, Mass., April 26.—The Miami (Fla.) University tennis team chalked up its second straight victory in three days today, swamping Harvard, 9-0, in an easy series tied off by Gardner Malloy, Eastern intercollegiate champion.

Wirephoto: Grimes Banished Again

1,000 Dogs Are Entered In Show Here Saturday

By Jack DeMoreland.

Entered from the cream of show dogdom on the Atlantic seaboard, 1,000 dogs will make the National Capital Kennel Club's eighth annual show on Saturday at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club the largest canine carnival to be held in Washington in recent years. The entry list tops that of last year by 240 dogs.

Cockers and Bostons show the leading numbers in the breeds entered, with English setters next. A canine rarity, an Irish water spaniel, is included in the entries.

Mrs. Hartley Dodge, of Madison, N. J., who sponsors the largest outdoor dog show in the U. S., has entered a contingent of German shepherds and pointers. The top collie breeder in the country, Mrs. Florence B. Ilch, has entered a number of that breed.

Marlu Kennels, of Long Branch, N. J., and Wild Oaks Kennel, of Golden Bridge, N. Y., are among others who will compete with breeds.

A premium list offering awards that total $11,000 has been offered this year. The list of judges contains an imposing number of prominent dog fanciers. Headed by Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, of New York, who has been accorded the honor of selecting the best of show, the list includes Alfred Delmont, of Wynnewood, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver C. Harriman, New York; William Cary Duncan, North Brookfield, Mass.; A. R. Moffit, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Mrs. Maude D. Smith, Rye, N. Y.; Alva Rosenberg, Brooklyn; William J. Burgess, Thompsonville, Conn.; Albert T. Rahner, Philadelphia; Miss Olga P. Mead, Amenia, N. Y.; Richard Quigley, Lock Haven, Pa.; Fred A. Bearse, Springfield, Mass.; Harry H. Brunt, Riverton, N. J.; Livingston E. Osborne, Chicago, and Mrs. Carolyn V. Blagden, Blue Bell, Pa.

The trophy committee is composed of Mrs. Frank Downing, wife of the first vice president of the kennel club; Mrs. Charles Beisel and Mrs. Honsick, wife of the club's secretary.

As an added attraction of the show, the Elie Sheetz trophy, presented annually to the person voted the greatest contributor to the advancement of dogdom, will be presented to Capt. Will Judy, of Chicago, editor of "Dog World" and one of the outstanding dog authorities of the country.

All entries in the show must have been made before 6 p. m. April 24, with an entry fee of $3 for the first entry of a dog and $2 for each additional entry of the same dog.

Two children's classes are included in the exhibits: Class A, for boys over 10 and under 15 years of age; Class B, for girls over 10 and under 15 years of age.

Five dollars is offered by the club for best of breed in every breed, provided six or more dogs are entered.

The show will be open from 9 a. m. until 6 p. m. and the judging will commence at 10 a. m.

Bees Defeat Dodgers, 9-5, In Wild Tilt

Grimes Is Banished in Dispute With Umpire Over Decision.

Boston Is Outhit, 15-13, DiMaggio Triples as Cuccinello Stars.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, April 26.—Though they outhit Boston, 15 to 13, the Brooklyn Dodgers dropped a 9-5 decision to the Bees today as Dodger Manager Burleigh Grimes was ruled off the field for the second day in succession.

It was a wild and woolly contest the National League rivals staged before a chilled gathering of 2,500 fans. Grimes was banished in the second inning by Umpire Larry Goetz, who took issue with burly Burleigh's remarks after Goetz ruled that Gene Moore, the Bees' rightfielder, had not swung at a bad pitch.

Grimes may have been angered additionally because, by that time, the Bostonians had battered Luke Hamlin, his starting pitcher, and southpaw Ralph Birkofer for seven runs. The Dodgers did better, however, after their boss had retired to the grandstand, coming back from an 8-0 deficit in the fourth to score five runs through the fifth, sixth and seventh.

Lou Fette, who won 25 games for St. Paul last year, made his league debut for the Bees, but was knocked out in the seventh. Veteran Bob Smith finished the game, though Fette gained credit for the victory.

Four singles, a base on balls and a passed ball by Catcher Phelps gave Boston four in the first, or as many runs as they had scored in their five previous games. Garms' single, Phelps' error, a triple by Vince DiMaggio and Tony Cuccinello's double produced three more runs in the second.

Phelps and Gilly Brack led the losers with four hits each, while Cuccinello's two doubles and a single paced the Bees.

Schmeling Sails For N. Y., 'Fight'

Berlin, April 26 (AP).—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, and his trainer, Max Machon, sailed for New York on the Bremen tonight, confident that Schmeling's title fight with Jimmy Braddock will be held in New York June 3 despite the legal warfare going on over it in the United States.

Schmeling, beaming all over, said: "This time I'm not carrying another offer to Braddock. Things will be all right after all." The last time he carried an offer of a big guarantee for Braddock to fight him in Germany.

The former champion already has worked himself into excellent shape at his country estate at Saarow. He weighs 195 pounds and intends to resume training at Speculator, N. Y., soon after reaching New York.

Wirephoto: One Reason Why Nats Lost

Tow Scores Knockout Over Mader in Fifth

By Bill McCormick.

Bob Tow, the large Alexandrian who drives a bus when he is not too busy driving home punches, dropped a short right hand on the chin of Eddie Mader in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round feature at Turner's Arena last night.

The New York heavyweight probably thought Robert had rammed one of his buses into his mandibles. Anyway, he flopped around the ring for a bit, then hoisted himself on the ropes and peered out into the ringside as though looking for a traffic cop to apprehend the hit and run driver. He was still looking when Referee Muggsy Morris finished the ten count which made Tow the winner on a clean knockout after 2 minutes and 5 seconds of the fifth.

Up until the finish which established Bob as the No. 1 local ring hero, things were not going so well for the Alexandria Adonis, or maybe they were. It is entirely possible that Robert was just waiting, content to let Mader pile up inconsequential points so long as he ultimately got an opening for a knockout punch.

Mader Ahead—Then——

His timing impaired by a long lay-off necessitated by a hip injury, Tow seemed unable to get his ring bearings in the first few minutes of fisticuffing. As time went on, however, his aim became truer and truer and as early as the fourth round he had given warning of his intentions by shooting one smart punch after another to the Mader head and midriff.

In the round preceding the kayo, Robert continually stabbed Eddie off balance with a long left and he dropped in enough pot-shot rights to send Mader to his corner wearing a worried look.

Mader bounced right out filled with determination in the fatal fifth. Flinging both hands with reckless abandon, he drove Tow thither and yon, apparently well in control of the situation.

Then came the finishing wallop, a short overhand right, which landed flush on the place where Mader would grow a Vandyke if he were a copy reader.

Womer Defeated.

Maynard (Mutt) Womer, former Southern Conference welterweight champion from the University of Virginia, made his local professional debut in a six-round preliminary against Sammy Bacala, an experienced pug from Baltimore.

At the end of the scheduled distance, Bacala was declared the unanimous victor. Superior condition told the tale. Womer entered the ring out of shape and no end sleepy because of an unexpectedly long train ride. It seems Womer left his headquarters in Charlottesville at 8 o'clock Sunday night and because of washed-out bridges did not arrive here until late yesterday afternoon. Without the edge in physical trim, Bacala might not have won.

In a brace of scheduled four-rounders, Frankie Saier, of Miami, scored a pleasing third-round knockout over Eddie Dulin, a Baltimore middleweight, and Billy Temes, of Washington, scored a unanimous decision over Bob Anderson, a lightweight from Leonardtown, Md.

Stewart Wins.

Ossie Stewart, the newest colored sensation in District rings, continued his winning streak by soundly trouncing Joe Pancho Pimentel, a Puerto Rican middleweight, in a good six-round semifinal.

Completely outclassed, Pimentel made things interesting by taking all the Sunday punches thrown by the heavy-hitting Stewart and wading back in for more punishment. When not busy soaking up wallops, Pimentel pummeled away at the Stewart midsection, but he was not able to do this enough to come even close to winning a single round.

Yanks Rescind $3,000 Raise Offer to Ruffing

New York, April 26 (AP).—It was reported here today that the world champion Yankees had withdrawn their offered $3,000 raise to Charley Ruffing, the holdout right-hander.

Originally the Yanks had sent their 20-game winner of last year a contract calling for $15,000. Now, it is understood, Ruffing will have to carry on any further negotiations at his 1936 rate of pay, $12,000.

Nedomatsky Signs Reilly as Manager

Ivan Nedomatsky, Southern Conference welterweight champion, yesterday formally became a professional as he signed a five-year contract with Pete Reilly, manager of featherweight champion Freddie Miller.

The contract calls for Nedomatsky to receive $100 a month during the five-year period it is in effect. That is only a guarantee. If Nedomatsky is able to make more, he shall receive it. Under the terms of the contract, the fighter will receive 66 2-3 per cent of all his purses, after the $100 a month is deducted, and Reilly will take the remainder.

After graduating from Maryland in June, Nedomatsky will be sent to New York to receive personal instruction from Reilly and a corps of trainers he employs to handle his outstanding stable.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Boston, Mass., April 26.—Tom Yawkey's high-salaried hirelings paid dividends here this wintry afternoon at the expense and abject humiliation of the Nats, 12 to 5.

Before a paucity of witnesses who stippled wind-swept Fenway Park with shivering little clusters of humanity, the Red Sox hammered Jimmy DeShong and Ed Linke with 15 solid smashes and before the end of the fourth inning, Bucky Harris practically conceded defeat because he left Linke in there with 9 runs staring him in his amiable pan.

Outside of the fifth inning, when near-tragedy stalked into the scheme of things, the game was a dull, uninteresting affair which turned out to be little more than batting practice for Joe Cronin's mob.

The tragedy seemed centered around the unconscious form of Bobby Doerr, the Red Sox's prized rookie second baseman from the Pacific Coast League, who was felled by Ed Linke's fast ball which struck the 19-year-old sensation flush on the left side of his head. Doerr regained consciousness in the dressing room and was rushed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital by Dr. Edmund O'Brien, club physician.

Late this evening Dr. O'Brien announced that Doerr was apparently unhurt, but that he was suffering from shock. He will remain at the hospital the next day or so for observation.

But if Doerr was suffering from shock, so was the Washington ball club, which never seemed to overcome the shock of Boston's siege-gun attack which started in the second inning when three runs were rammed across the plate.

DeShong's labors today were confined to the first couple of innings—and Jimmy was in dire straits as early as the first, when he started off walking Doerr and hitting Roger Cramer on the thigh. An outfield fly and timely double play, however, solved DeShong's problems.

But in the second his continued wildness—for he walked two men and the Sox socked three hits off him—ended DeShong's work for the day, because Boston pushed three runs across the plate and Jimmy out of the box.

Linke, taking over the responsibility in the third, apparently had Boston's number, since he retired the side with little trouble. But in the fourth the Bostons hopped on Linke, smashing out six hits and matching their safe swats with six runs. Singles by Marcum, Almada, Rick Ferrell, Higgings and Gaffke, and a double by Joe Cronin accounted for this damage. And Linke helped along Boston's cause by walking two.

In the fifth, when Doerr was hit, Roger Cramer tripled and Oscar Melillo singled and this was adequate enough to score two more runs for Boston. And Boston's final run came in the sixth on the wings of Col. Mills' lusty double and a couple of infield outs.

The Nats' insufficient run-making was produced in this manner: In the second, Stone's terrific smash down the rightfield foul line was good for a triple—and eventually a run—for Stone scored when Doerr muffed Lewis' easy grounder.

In the fourth, the Nats bashed out four hits from which they could do no better than score a couple of runs in the persons of Buddy Myer and Ben Chapman. Upon this auspicious occasion, singles were accounted for by Linke, Myer, Kuhel and Simmons, and Chapman got on base by dint of a walk.

The Nats tried as best they could to even matters to some extent in the eighth with two runs. But Johnny Marcum, the big Boston right-hander, helped Washington along here by walking three men, forcing in Myer. And the Nats earned the other run when young Herb Crompton crashed a hot single to left, scoring Stone.

After that the Senators kind of called a halt to their activities because they went down in the ninth with only Johnny Stone's single to right to show for their effort.

Yanks Get 13 Hits, Make Triple Play in Beating A's, 7-1, for League Lead

Broaca, First Yank to Last, Gives 6 Hits

Gehrig, Lazzeri Each Drive in Two Runs With 3 Singles.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—The Yankees pounded out 13 hits today to gain a 7-1 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics and thereby accomplished a handsome handful of spectacular feats.

First and foremost they displaced the A's as American League leaders with a record of three triumphs and one defeat. Johnny Broaca, who limited the losers to six hits, though he gave seven bases on balls, became the first Yankee pitcher to go the route this season.

The world champions also pulled off the year's first triple play, the club's first three-ply killing since Yankee Stadium was opened 14 years ago. In addition Broaca, the be-spectacled Yale alumnus, extended the control he held over the Athletics last year, when he turned them back four times.

Harry Kelley, who led the A's pitchers with 15 victories last season, bore the brunt of the champions' attack. They hit him for four runs in six innings, then got three more on four hits off Lee Ross in the seventh.

The two veterans also figured in the triple play, which occurred in the eighth and killed off a potential Philadelphia rally. With Moses on second and Bob Johnson on first, Chubby Dean drove a liner at Lazzeri. The second baseman purposely trapped the ball and flipped it to Crosetti to force Johnson at second.

Crosetti's throw to Gehrig beat Dean to first, and the "Iron man" then whipped the ball across the diamond to Rolfe, who tagged Moses as he came sliding into third.

Birmingham Leads Night's Duckpin Play

Shooting an all-time record set of 416 for Class D singles, Alfred N. Birmingham, Columbia Lodge, No. 174, I. A. M. League roller, headlined the night's bowling as the Washington City Duckpin Association tournament opened its second week at Lucky Strike last night.

Walter Robinson, of Peoples Drug Stores, laced the maples for a 394 to simultaneously break the old Class D mark of 390 rolled by Dick Clouser in last year's championships at Arcadia.

W. A. Dorsey, of the National Union League, provided one of the bright spots on the night's program when he shot high game of the tournament, a sparkling 172. His 370 set gained him sixth place in Class C singles. Larson Swain, another National Union roller, took second place in Class E singles with 331.

Torrance, Another Giant, in 'Battle of Redemption'

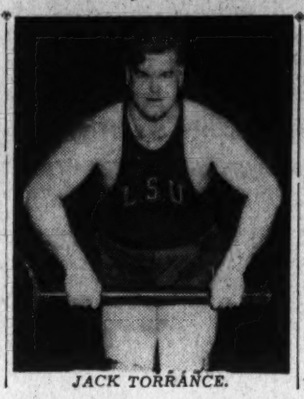
By the United Press.

New York, April 26.—Because of its heart appeal, that scheduled six-round bout between Jack "No Tankers" Torrance and Abe "Simple" Simon at the Hippodrome Wednesday night has captivated cauliflower alley.

This "meeting of the martyrs"—this "battle of redemption"— palpitates with pathos. Each of these widely publicized young ring giants is so big that he claims "everybody's pickin' on me." Each packs about 254 pounds on a 6 foot 4 inch beam.

And each will climb into the ring grimly determined to prove that his traducers are wrong. Big blond Torrance, former world champion shotputter, will strive to demonstrate that the Baton Rouge rumpus was all a mistake. And that he actually knocked out his first four professional ring opponents without help of spring boards or other diving paraphernalia.

Remember—Jack's fifth scheduled opponent, Earl Phillips, ran out on a Baton Rouge bout in February, blowing the whistle and shouting that he had been imported from New York to "take a dive" for Torrance. When the tumult subsided, Torrance was given a clean bill of health by the Louisiana boxing commission, but others connected with the affair were fined and suspended. Jack's manager, Herb Brodie, was one of those penalized. Now Jack is making his New York debut, determined to redeem not only himself but the others who were involved in the Baton Rouge scandal.



JACK TORRANCE.

Similarly, big, awkward Abe Simon is trying to prove that the "syndicate" was wrong in taking him off its pay roll because syndicate members thought he couldn't fight and probably never would develop into a fighter. Abe, a former interscholastic shot-putter, had been picked up about two years ago by a syndicate of millionaire socialites, headed by Jock Whitney. They believed that the huge Brooklyn athlete would develop into a champion because of his size and strength. They gave Abe a weekly allowance while Jimmy Bronson trained him. Abe registered 13 kayoes in winning his first 15 fights. But a couple of months ago, Lou Nova, of San Francisco, beat Abe.

That was a calamity, indeed. Because the syndicate then turned Abe adrift. So Jimmy Bronson, who still had faith in the big fellow, took sole possession of Mr. Simon and his training bills. Abe hopes to justify himself and Bronson's confidence Wednesday night.

Abe and Torrance are not fighting the main event at the Hippodrome. Alas—no. The fistic fates have dealt too unkindly with them. They are fighting merely the semi-final to the Arturo Kodoy-Tony Galento slugfest. However, one thing is certain—Simon and Torrance will give their all when they amble into the ring. There will be no "tanking" this time, because Bronson is the Sir Galahad of pugilism. Neither Jimmy nor any of his boxers ever have been connected with an unsavory bout.

Archer Proves Star Of Terp Frosh Quartet

By Lewis F. Atchison.

It takes four men to run a mile relay race, but the performance of one can mean the difference between victory and defeat, and Coach Geary Eppley, of Maryland, is giving Jack Archer, his No. 1 man, credit for the Terp freshmen's splendid performance in the Penn Relays last week. The Terps finished second to Pitt, surprising some of their more highly regarded opponents.

Brother of Bob Archer, who carried the Old Line colors to innumerable victories in 1934, '35 and '36, young Jack jumped out in front with the leaders on that first jammed lap and was one of the first to complete the initial lap. Consequently he handed over the baton to Jim Kehoe in semiprivacy, which was a big help. Pitt ultimately proved too speedy for the College Parkers, but second place for them was a moral victory, and Archer made it possible.

He absorbed considerable punishment in that first gruelling quarter-mile, and finished it with as many cuts as a tenderloin. He had to fight his way through the mob, a foregone conclusion in a field of any size, and probably had to resort to pushing, shoving and elbowing along with the others to edge through, but he made it.

"He made a mistake, too," commented Eppley, "trying to get through a small pocket. But it was worth the gamble. If he had made it, it would have meant several valuable yards to us and I don't blame him for trying. Then, when he failed, he had to try another way and, consequently, ran harder to make up the lost ground, so he paid for the error and learned, I hope, a good lesson."

Hugh Miller, The Post's sterling picture-taker, can take a bow for helping Bill Guckeyson win second place in the javelin throw. "Gike" gives a strip of film made by Hughey credit for an improvement in his work. A couple of errors were revealed by the film, and corrected pronto.

Another satisfied coach is Ted Hughes, of Gallaudet, whose relayers put together four fast quarters and finished second to Washington College in the Mason-Dixon championship. It was a sweet draught for the ambitious Kendall Greeners, for trailing in their dust were a couple of their favorite rivals, Catholic University and American University.

Another of the old coaching regime is about to retire at the Florida avenue school, incidentally, for Wally Krug is through as basketball coach. He was supplanted by Orrel Mitchell last season in football, a position that Mitchell has since left, and his decision to quit the court sport leaves him free to devote his time exclusively to classroom work. "Turk" Tobin, Mount St. Mary's alumnus, has succeeded to the football job, but no basketball coach has been selected.

Maryland's diamond devotees are hoping for fair and warmer weather Saturday when Georgetown visits College Park for a return game. The reason is simple enough, the poorer the weather the better the Hoyas. Last year Georgetown won the first game under weather conditions decidedly not the best, and lost the second game, which was played in perfect baseball weather. Last Saturday the Hoyas won again, and again the weather was cold and generally unfavorable. Hence, the Terps figure with a good day Saturday they may hang it on Joe Judge's boys.

Pro Grid Leagues Settle Player Right

New York, April 26 (AP).—The National Professional Football League came to terms with two leading minor loops, the Dixie League and the American Association, regarding player transfers at a meeting here tonight but failed to settle the question of territorial rights.

The major circuit, represented by President Joseph F. Carr of Columbus, Ohio, agreed to respect the rights of minor league clubs to players. No player under contract to a club in either the Dixie League or the American Association, which operates in New York's metropolitan district, can be signed by a national league club without the minor league team's consent.

The question of territorial rights was left open when Carr failed to reach an agreement with Dixie League officials as to whether the major circuit should be permitted to operate in Washington next fall. George Marshall, owner of the Boston Redskins of the National League, has made plans to shift his team to Washington next season. Ralph Boyer and Irving Mace, representing the Washington pros, claimed prior rights to the territory.

GAMES THIS WEEK.
Today—Central at Eeastern, 3:30.
Friday—Wilson at Roosevelt, 3:30.

By John R. Vosburgh

If Eastern High's diamond has dried sufficiently by 3:30 p. m. today Eastern and Central will commit their annual interhigh series game at that hour. Barring a sudden turn for the worse this morning on the part of the weather, officials believe the field will be ready for use.

In that case Central will be in for a rather tough afternoon, its third of the series. Already beaten by Western and Wilson, the Mount Pleasanters run smack into the left-handed pitching of Walter Stockwell and the outcome should favor Walter.

It was Walter who upset Tech with a five-hit performance and it was Central whose mediocre hitting helped Western and Wilson. At the same time there is the matter of Central pitching, which has allowed 28 hits in two games.

Minus a reliable pitcher such as Stockwell, Bortz, of Wilson; Bright and Raferty, of Western, and Doonis, of Tech, Coach Jack Ray has been virtually left at the post all season. Unless Dick Rozelle or Bill Noonan, his two starting twirlers, show a distinct upturn today, Central's two-game losing streak is likely to become three.

Anxious to tie Western at the top of the league, Eastern will trot out its newly found batting attack which functioned fairly well against Tech. The Lincoln Parkers garnered eight hits off Tech's Buddy Webb that day, including a double, triple and homer.

Stockwell, who collected a single and double, and Everett O'Brien, who rapped a single and home run, are two promising trouble-makers for Central's mound staff.

Eastern, incidentally, has made only one error in the series. The infield combination of Paul Kobre at first, Lee Lusby at second, Al Kidwell at short and Marshall Jacobs at third looked like the smoothest in the city against Tech.

With Stockwell southpawing 'em over and Rip Carver ready for duty, that Eastern infield is only so much added gall so far as Central is concerned. About the most that can be said for the latter is that it is about due to win.

Sports in Brief

By the Associated Press.

Harlan Ingwalson and Emil Ring, Rockford, Ill., hung up a 1,279 total—highest score ever hit by a Rockford entry in national tourney competition—to top the day's doubles scoring. Mike Straka and Tony Slanina, Chicago, relinquished their doubles title earlier in the day when they totaled 1,203, 142 pins less than the mark which won the crown for them last year at Indianapolis and 154 pins shy of the leading doubles count in the current tourney, scored by Nelson Burton, Dallas, Tex., and Vergil Gibbs, Kansas City.

Mexico City.—Australia's Davis Cup stock took a jump up today when Vivian McGrath, forced out Friday by recurrence of an old hand injury, returned to practice and trimmed Adrian Quist, 6-3.

St. Paul.—Robert (Bob) Connery, former owner of the St. Paul Baseball Club of the American Association, resigned his "advisory" position today, club officials announced.

Los Angeles—The American duo of Bobby Walthour, jr., and Oscar Juner maintained their lead in the international six-day bicycle race today.

Rochester, N. Y.—Led by Ella Burmeister, defending singles and all events champion with a 575, the Bowman Dairy five, of Madison, Wis., rolled into seventh place in the team events in the Women's International Bowling Congress here tonight.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Gino Garibaldi, 218, pinned Laverne Baxter, 228, with three body slams and a body press in 10:10.

W. Virginia Streams Get 21,000 More Trout

State, Recognizing the Need, Has Jumped Its Distribution From Less Than One to More Than Three Million Trout a Year.

It is said, and to some extent the thought is agreeable, that trout fishing appeals to all kinds of people, drawing in them a common bond of kinship which makes the angler holding an expensive fly rod the equal, and no more, of his comrade who may be trying his luck with a 10-cent line and crudely cut pole. It is this common denominator of kinship which makes trout fishing one of the finest sports to be found anywhere, but especially in West Virginia, with its innumerable swift flowing mountain streams tumbling through aisles of rhododendron, hemlock and pine, green-fringing the forests of hardwoods, the last Eastern frontier of the native brook trout.

ACKERMAN

In West Virginia, during the last three years, the annual distribution of trout has been jumped from less than a million to more than three million fish a year. This concentration upon production of more and more trout, occasioned by the commission's determination to do everything in its power to close the gap between demand of a steadily increasing army of fishermen, and the supply, should make for improved angling this year, barring unexpected weather conditions, such as drought as severe as last year's. The commission says it is not within the power of any man-made agency to absolutely assure everyone of catching a fish short of hooking one onto each person's line, and neither is it desirable. There would be no sport in fishing, if that were the case. But to those anxious to bring home a mess of fish, as well as those advanced sportsmen who get most of their fun from the battle with the gamey beauties and the communion with outdoors rather than from catching the limit, it can be said that the stocking of 21,000 adult rainbow trout this spring should add greatly to their pleasures.

* * * *

This great number of large fish were spread over the entire trout section and in no stream were they dumped in one place, so any likely pool or riffle is likely to be productive of strikes. A complete list of these streams, with directions for reaching them, will be in Post Notes before the season opens on May 1.

* * * *

West Virginia early recognized the greater demands that each succeeding year made on her streams and has met it with a well-balanced plan, that this year, has stocked many hundreds of miles of fine waters with big fish, that will permit sport for all who might like to try them. Many other streams have been stocked with slightly less than legal fish, closed and posted until 1938, so that there will be a reserve and a chance for recuperation.

There were some 10,000 of these small trout, all of them over 4 inches, and many others, older, but undersized, placed in streams that will not go dry and in which the temperature rise is not enough to prevent them summering in good shape.

* * * *

Some few changes in West Virginia laws concerning daily and seasonal creel limits is the reason for the repetition. The minimum length of rainbow trout is 8 inches, and ten may be taken in one day. Of other trout species, the minimum length of the brook is 6 inches, the maximum catch per day, 15; brown trout, minimum length is 8 inches, maximum catch, 10 per day. The days limit for all species of trout is 15 per day, except that not more than ten rainbow and brown combined may be caught in one day. The seasonal limit for all trout is 150.

* * * *

In setting these limitations of catch, the commission is mindful of the fact that inland water fishing is dependent, more than it ever has been in the past, upon the sportsmanship of the individual fisherman. And it urges that each may carry astream, in addition to his creel, a determination to fish for the love of fishing and to take no more trout than he or his family can eat at one meal. It urges this, knowing that the body of sportsmen in general favors this approach to stream fishing, and approves the later opening of the season. Those few who criticize the May 1 opening, whose opinion may be epitomized by that querulous complaint that the season has been set back "to save fishing for unborn generations, or for some other reason" may be assured that that is exactly one of the reasons the season was set back—but not only for the benefit of unborn generations. It will help fishing for the present generation, too. It will make "More and Better Fishing."

District Girl To Start Golf Tour Today

By Merrell Whittlesey.

Helen Dettweiler, 22-year-old Congressional Club star, who gained national recognition in Southern tournaments last winter, will leave for Kansas City this morning on a combination pleasure trip and exhibition tour with Babe Didrikson.

She will visit relatives in Kansas City and Oklahoma City and will play golf daily with the long-hitting Didrikson, probably playing in several matches.

The tour will lead the pair into Atlanta for the Women's Southern Amateur, the latter part of May, in which Helen will participate. Miss Didrikson will accompany Helen to her home here for a three-week visit, in which several exhibition matches are planned, including one that may bring Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews to the Capital. A local golfer will probably round out the foursome.

They will leave here for Chicago, scene of the Women's Western Open and other Western tournaments.

Helen will miss a majority of the local women's tournament schedule, including the Maryland State and District championships. She withdrew her entry from the Keefer Cup Play, starting tomorrow, after Miss Didrikson's phone call. Helen's tournament debut locally last week saw her finish a stroke behind Betty Meckley and Ellen Kincaid for Keeler Cup medal honors, due to a seven on the last hole.

Second Team Matches Postponed Indefinitely

Second team matches for the lady golfers, scheduled for today at Indian Spring, have been indefinitely postponed due to the waterlogged condition of the Four Corners course. Mrs. Noble J. Waldron will announce the new date later.

East Potomac Spring Tournament Flooded

Flood waters set back the public links tournament debut yesterday, East Potomac's spring tournament being postponed, probably until next week, by the Potomac washing over the sea wall for the second straight year.

Washington Golf Club Releases Schedule

Washington Golf and Country Club released its May-June schedule yesterday, though Ralph S. Fowler, chairman of the golf committee. The 72-hole Moore Cup competition, with handicaps, will feature the play.

May 1 and 2, blind bogey tournament, prizes for blind bogey, low net and high net; May 8 and 9, sweepstakes; May 15-16, selected nine-hole event, half handicap allowance; May 22-23, sweepstakes; May 30-31, flag tournament, full handicap allowance; 18-hole putting contest for the Sam Mosby Memorial, ties to be played off at 18 holes.

June 1-27, Moore Cup competition, 72 holes medal play with full handicap allowance, first round to be played before June 6, second round on or before June 13, third round on or befre June 20, and furth round on or before June 27; June 5-6 sweepstakes; June 12-17, par, birdie and eagle contest, full handicap allowance; June 19-20, sweepstakes; June 26-27, match play against par, full handicaps.

Georgetown University's team match with the University of Delaware, carded today at Kenwood, met with a like fate of other local golf affairs when the soggy condition of the Kenwood course forced a postponement.

Battle Jack, Dashing Doe Are Victors

Only 3,000 Venture Out to Plant; Wandrel Wins Opener.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 26.—Bucking a nor'easter and menaced by a fast-closing rival, Jimmie Cabaniss, a gelded son of Mormont, stuck by his running guns long enough to win the Laurel claiming handicap, a jaunt of 1 mile and 70 yards that served feature purposes at this track today. Quitting and groggy as the favorite players believed he would be after he had set a brisk pace along the backstretch, Jimmie Cabaniss refused to yield to the rush of Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Zay and won by a head margin. A length farther back came Silent Shot, the supposed ace mudder, to be third in the field of five.

Ridden by Jockey G. Napier, the gelding paid a scattered backing a $33.70 mutuel while running in the colors of J. Shirley Riley. Time for the muddy route was 1:48.

Seldom in Maryland racing history has there been a day less auspicious for turf purposes. A gale of slightly less than hurricane intensity swept across the infield and the 3,000 or less customers huddled in the corners of the grandstand and betting ring, perhaps half of that number not venturing out to watch the races. At one stage of the program it appeared that Tommy Daly, in charge of the loud speakers, was risking arrest for talking to himself.

Ironbound delayed the start, but Starter Milton finally sent the field away in good alignment. Jimmie Cabaniss won the opening skirmish for race-setting honors with Zay. Silent Shot was third to that pair as they went into the backstretch.

Jimmy Cabaniss opened a good lead going to the far turn, but his few backers still thought he was flattering them. Zay had been taken under a grip.

In the stretch, Zay gathered momentum to come through with a drive which all but dislodged the tiring but victorious gelding.

Wandrel Takes Opener.

Those who risked pneumonia to watch the first race saw Jay McNamara's Wandrel splash to the wire a length and a half ahead of Mrs. John Bosley, jr.'s Peppery with Italian Harry third. Scratches riddled the field and only five sought the purse. Wandrel, reserved off the pacemakers, came from behind to win going away. The 7-year-old mare paid a $6.10 mutuel and was clocked in 1:53 3-5.

Battle Jack, a son of the mud-running John P. Grier, made every post a winning one in the second race, a 4½-furlong dash for juveniles. Ridden by Joe O'Malley, the colt held a length and a quarter margin over Grape Thief, a first-time starter from the barn of John Hay Whitney. Way Out, owned by J. B. Belk, was third. It was a case of "try and catch Battle Jack" from the start. The winner was favorite at a $5 mutuel and was timed in 0:55 4-5.

Dashing Doe Wins Third.

John E. Hughes' Dashing Doe made it two victories in three races this spring by taking the third event, a sprint over the 6-furlong course. Ridden by Ralph Eccard, leading jockey at the meeting, Dashing Doe overcame poor racing luck to win by 2½ lengths over the Shandon Farm's Aglow. Third money went to Broadkill. Dashing Doe had to be taken up when blocked but came around the leaders and, despite bearing out, took the purse in a drive. The daughter of Distraction paid $3.90 and ran the route in 1:14 2-5.

Time Out! . . . By Chet Smith

The fight's off—he says they promised him a shot at Barney Ross—so he's on a sit-down strike.

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings

Havre de Grace, Md., April 26.

Dear Al:

This has been passed along to me as a true true story. One of the Ninth street boys was writing numbers. He boasted that if the cops did catch him they wouldn't find any evidence because he was going to swallow the slips. I'm told that he even practiced chewing up paper now and then to keep in shape for the moment when action would be a necessity. One day he was standing on the corner and one of his regular customers came up, handed him a dollar bill and asked for 25 cents on 652. The writer pulled out a slip and wrote the necessary information. At that moment he felt a heavy hand on his shoulder. He was ready for the test. He shoved the paper into his mouth, chewed quickly and then swallowed. With victory written all over his face he turned. It wasn't the law, it was a friend with whom the numbers writer served a hitch in the Navy. "Things must be pretty good with you, pal," said the heavy-handed fellow. "Ain't so pretty good, mate," came back the numbers writer. "Well, then why did you put that dollar bill in your mouth and swallow it?" asked mate. Strange as it seems, the numbers writer had downed the bill instead of the slip. "Didn't I tell you things ain't so pretty good," he said sadly as he gave his customer 75 cents change. BILL.

First race—Grainger raced along the outside fence last out and can better that effort considerably. I expect a better ride. Daffy won his last impressively and must be respected. Adamite and Infilee will like the going.

Second race—Sea Gull may come from behind and take this purse. Skyride, El Bandido and Addis Ababa are all front runners and may burn out in the stretch. Wittekind won on a similar track at Charles Town.

Third race—Virnock runs few bad races and seems headed for a set of brackets here despite the 115-pound assignment. Touche gets in light, but runs few races alike. Moon Harvest to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Tedema showed excellent speed here last week and I expect great things of this juvenile. Benjamin and Catalysis to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Clingendaal was over his head last out. Seems to be well suited by this field and I anticipate a victory. Rough Time may need racing, but Clocker Mike says he's ready. The Bomar entry of May Keen and Sweet Desire should get part of the money.

Sixth race—The Mauler showed signs of returning to good form last out. Meets only cheap ones here. Helen Bab and the improving Strophe to take care of the others.

Best bet—Merrily On.

WANDREL, within striking distance of the pacemakers from the start, came around PEPPERY to take command in the stretch and won going away. PEPPERY dwelt slightly at the break, went up on the outside of FAIR BILLY to lead approaching the final bend and continued willingly, but was no match for the winner. ITALIAN HARRY was taken back off the pace of FAIR BILLY along the backstretch and closed gamely. FAIR BILLY was used up setting and pressing the pace and tired. REGAL LADY, closest to the pace of Cosette from the beginning, rallied sharply when placed to a drive midway of the stretch and disposed of COSETTE to win going away. COSETTE was rushed far out soon after the break and continued willingly through the stretch. MY ELSIE faltered badly after going forwardly to the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. The Laurel. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Claiming Handicap. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:40½. JIMMIE CABANISS, first away, drew clear of ZAY to take command going into the backstretch, was hard ridden thereafter and barely lasted to stave off the closing bid of ZAY. The latter, steadied along within striking distance of the pace, gained sharply when placed to punishment in the final eighth and just missed. SILENT SHOT rallied only mildly after going forwardly. HER REIGH stopped.

General Motors Net Declines; Output at Peak

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—General Motors Corporation today reported a sharp decline in first-quarter earnings, but announced output of motor cars in March rose to a new record.

Showing effects of the strike, net earnings on the common stock for the first quarter equaled 99 cents a share, compared with $1.17 a share for the first quarter of 1936. Net earnings available for dividends for the first quarter totaled $44,814,166, compared with $52,464,174 for the first quarter last year. Earnings were before deducting provision for surtax on undistributed profits.

Alfred E. Sloan, jr., president, said operating results for the quarter "were importantly affected by the almost complete stoppage of manufacturing for nearly half the period. That being the case, it is interesting to observe that the organization was able to control expense and to resume manufacturing when permitted to do so, with the result that the decline in earnings was limited to a reduction of approximately 15 per cent, as compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

"Dollar sales were substantially equaled and the output of motor cars, the corporation's principal product, for the month of March established a new record for all time."

Cash, United States Government and other marketable securities increased to $223,715,796 at March 31, 1937, from $195,658,172 at December 31, 1936, and $218,034,223 at March 31, 1936. Net working capital increased to $378,294,268 at March 31, 1937, from $339,686,551 at December 31, 1936, and $355,248,902 at March 31, 1936.

New Diesel Unit.

New York, April 26.—The formation of a new division, to be known as Diesel engine division, of General Motors Corporation was announced today by Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president.

The new division will manufacture a line of Winton Diesel engines, beginning with a 20-horsepower, single-cylinder unit up to 160 horsepower, six-cylinder unit. The manufacture of Diesel engine fuel injectors, which has been carried on in the General Motors research laboratories for the last seven years, will be moved to the new plant.

A 75-acre tract of land, located at the intersection of the Pere Marquette Railroad and Outer drive, Detroit, has been purchased and erection of a new plant will be started at once. W. T. Crowe has been appointed general manager of the new division.

Steeel Production At All-Time High

New York, April 26 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 1 point to 92.3 per cent of capacity, compared with 91.3 per cent last week, and a new high since August, 1929, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 90.7 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 71.2 per cent.

A spokesman for the Institute pointed out that the actual tonnage produced, which should amount to 1,209,000 this week, would be an historic high for the industry. It was explained that while a higher rate of operations had been seen in 1929, the total capacity of the industry was less at that time.

Heavy Selling Drives Stocks To New Lows for the Year

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, April 26.—The bottom fell out of the stock market today as speculative forces dumped holdings at losses of 1 to 5 points generally. There were a few much wider downswings. A large assortment of leaders touched new lows for the year or longer and heavy selling waves frequently put the ticker tape several minutes behind.

Most brokerage quarters apparently were at sea regarding the prime reason for the plunge. Some pointed to the recurrence of rumors the Government is considering steps to stem the extraordinary inflow of gold. Early reports that the Administration would make a statement on the matter were denied subsequently at the White House.

An additional factor was seen in more than the usual amount of offerings from abroad. Commission houses with foreign connections noted a number of speculators in London and on the continent had been hard hit lately by the slump in world commodity prices and may have been forced to disgorge security commitments to cover their losses in staples.

Depressing also was another break in rubber, grain and cotton futures as well as a drop in export copper. While United States Government bonds just about held their own, secondary corporate loans weakened. At Chicago, wheat was off 3⅛ to the limit of 5 cents a bushel permitted in a day's trading; corn lost 1 to 3⅜; cotton yielded 90 cents to $1.35 a bale; rubber was off more than 1 cent a pound.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks retreated 2.1 points at 66.9, a new 1937 bottom. The decline was the most severe for any session since August 21 last year. Transfers of 2,020,810 shares compared with 1,202,559 Friday and was the largest aggregate since April 7.

Steels were among the most pronounced locers, notwithstanding current mill operations were officially estimated at a top since August, 1929, with actual tonnage establishing a record. United States Steel dropped 5¼ points at 105¼, and Bethlehem was 4⅜ lower at 84½.

General Motors reported a setback in first-quarter earnings due to the strike shut-down, but Wall Street expected this. The stock was off 2⅝ at 55⅞. Chrysler lost 4¼ at 111¼.

Despite a sizable increase in March net operating income for leading roads, rail shares toppled with the rest. Principal losers in this section were Santa Fe at 80¼; Baltimore & Ohio, 33¼; Southern Railway, 36; Northern Pacific, 29¾; Southern Pacific, 53⅛; N. Y. Central, 45¼, and Great Northern, 49⅜.

Although thought was taken of a possible recession in business later this year, analysis, on the whole, believed the slowdown would be only temporary with further improvement likely after a period of readjustment.

Breadth of the day's liquidating movement was indicated by the fact that of 925 stocks changing hands 813 declined, 40 advanced and 72 were unchanged.

Conspicuous on the slide were Republic Steel at 38⅛, Anaconda, 52½; Kennecott, 53⅞; International Nickel, 59; Cerro de Pasco, 68½; American Smelting, 82¼; Consolidated Edison, 37; North American 25; National Distillers, 31; Western Union, 61¼; Sears Roebuck, 83⅛; Montgomery Ward, 53; Woolworth, 49¾; Loew's 76½; duPont, 152⅝; U. S. Rubber, 56; Goodyear, 40¾; Standard Oil of N. J., 64⅞; J. I. Case, 154; Sloss-Sheffield, 152½; Coca-Cola, 149½; Yellow Truck, 28, and Texas Corporation, 57¾.

Speculative and lower rated issues felt the whip of bearish sentiment in the bond market today while Government and high-grade corporate loans offered stiff resistance.

Losses were most pronounced in the rail section, although numerous industrial and utility obligations recoiled sharply. Traders said the accelerated downward movement reflected the nasty retreat of listed stocks which, in turn, was attributed to persistent rumors of a gold announcement by the White House. These were officially denied in the afternoon, but the disclaimer had little visible effect marketwise.

Most active rails fell back fractions to a point or more, although several went considerably beyond that limit. "Katy" 5s of 1962 dropped 3 points to 79, the series "I" 5s lost 2⅜ to 41⅛ and the "H" 5s fell 2 to 41. Lehigh Valley 4s declined 2¼ to 60, Boston & Maine 5s dropped 2 to 82 and Baltimore & Ohio 4½s lowered 1¾ to 74. The Associated Press average for 20 carrier liens declined .3 of a point to 93.

International Hydro-Electric 6s reacted 2⅛ points to 74¾ and Abitibi Power 5s lost 1¾ to 104½. Bethlehem Steel obligations reacted a half point or more and numerous industrials lost about a point. The Associated Press averages for 10 industrials and 10 utilties fell .2 of a point each, to 102.7 and 99.5, respectively.

United States Government bonds held to narrow ranges and, although the majority slipped a bit lower, several closed to the good. Losses ranged to 9-32 of a point. Gains were even narrower.

The foreign quarter was quiet and lower as both European and South American issues settled fractionally to a point or so beneath their previous closing figures.

Turnover was less than might be expected in view of the market's temper. Volume totaled $12,157,000, face value, for all bonds, compared with $10,077,000 Friday.

Life Insurance Sales Advance Sharply Here

March Business by Local Agents 28 Per Cent Over Year Ago.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Local life insurance sales made a sharp advance in March, the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn., reports. Writing of $7,195,000 of new business during the month by local agents resulted in a 28 per cent gain over the corresponding period in 1936 and placed Washington in the lead in percentage gains over every large city in the country and most of the States of the Union. The bureau's figures further revealed a 15 per cent increase for the District of Columbia for the first quarter of the current year over the similar period a year ago.

The survey recorded continued activity in the Washington metropolitan area. Virginia made a 25 per cent advance; South Carolina, one of 27 per cent; West Virginia, 15 per cent; North Carolina, 6 per cent, and Maryland, 1 per cent. The average gain for the United States was 15 per cent for the comparative months and 6 per cent for the corresponding quarters.

Maryland underwriters transacted $8,417,000 worth of new business in March and those of Virginia $6,668,000. Other States in the local district did the following: North Carolina, $6,779,000; South Carolina, $3,152,000; West Virginia, $4,367,000. Eighty per cent of the companies doing business in Washington announced an increase for the month and the country's total in new business for March was $604,257,000.

The nearest city to Washington in gains was Chicago, with 26 per cent. Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland and other cities made no such definite advances. New Mexico headed the list of States with a 46 per cent increase.

Convention Plans Complete.

Officers of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and committee chairmen for the nineteenth annual convention of the association returned from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., yesterday after completing arrangements for the annual banking meeting there May 26-31. All members predicted one of the association's most successful conventions.

The Greenbrier Hotel management will have everything in readiness for the local bankers, said Thomas J. Groom, acting president of the association. In addition to Mr. Groom those making the trip included General Convention Chairman A. M. McLachlen, Charles H. Doing, T. Stanley Holland, Hilleary G. Hoskinson, Robert H. Lacey, A. Scott Offutt, John A. Reilly, Sidney F. Talliaferro and Wilmer J. Waller.

Modernization Loans.

It is expected that various banks will continue independently to make modernization loans which were originally authorized under Title I of the National Housing Act, which expired April 1. These loans for alterations and repairs to buildings have been regarded as an important factor in the revival of business for many months. They resulted in additional employment of labor and the buying of building materials and equipment in the work of renovation.

Numerous members of the banking profession believe there are many who have postponed modernization and are now ready to improve their homes. While limited to $2,500, these loans have been of benefit to both borrower and the financial institutions making them. Local banks' first entry into the program was made under the direction of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Savings Banks Meeting.

Robert E. Healy, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, will speak on Government activities in connection with utilities at the annual convention of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks in New York tomorrow, Thursday and Friday. Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British economist, will discuss the "Economic Outlook Under Managed Money" and Harold G. Moulton, president of Brooklings Institute, has for his subject, "Observations on the Railroad Situation Today."

President Virgil Jordan, of the National Industrial Conference Board, will be on the program. Savings executives and trustees will give special attention to the outlook for thrift at a time when the mutual savings banks report a record number of deposits and depositors. Attainment of sound public relations will be discussed by Thomas J. Kiphart, president of the Financial Advertisers Association and director of public relations of the Fifth Third Union Trust Co. of Cincinnati.

The closing session Friday morning will be devoted to consideration of mortgage problems and insurance. A. George Gilman, chairman of the committee on mortgages, will preside over this discussion. Charles

Wheat Tumbles 5c Per Bushel, Limit for Day

Corn, Oats, Provisions and Rye Join in Sharp Decline.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 26.—Preceded by sensational collapsing of Liverpool and Winnipeg prices, the Chicago wheat market fell 5 cents a bushel late today, the extreme immediate permissible limit.

Reiteration of often-denied rumors of prospective changes in this country's gold policy accompanied the downward sweep of wheat values. Other reasons that were given included virtual complete temporary stoppage of export business in Canadian wheat.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were 3½@5 cents lower, compared with Saturday's finish, May $1.25⅝@1.25¾, July $1.15@1.15⅛, September $1.12½@1.12⅝; corn 1 cent to 3⅝ down, May $1.23@1.23¼, July $1.13¾@1.14, September $1.06½@1.06⅝; oats ⅛@1¼ off, May 47¾@47⅞, and rye showing 1⅛@1⅝ cents loss, May $1.05¼. The outcome in provisions was 10 to 17 cents setback.

Cities Service Net Increases $1,109,000

Sales of Natural Gas, Power and Oil Products at New Peak.

New York, April 26.—Consolidated gross income of Cities Service Co. and subsidiaries for 1936 amounted to $49,686,000, according to the report just mailed to stockholders. This is an increase of $4,299,000 over 1935.

Net income for 1936 after all prior charges, applicable to the stocks of the Cities Service Co., was $6,965,000. This is an increase of $1,109,000 over 1935 after providing an additional $3,641,000 for current appropriations for depletion, depreciation and replacements, and reserves for contingencies.

This is the first time since the suspensoin of dividends in 1932 that the dividend requirements on the preferred stocks of the company have been earned. The improvement was distributed among all three major branches of the business—petroleum, electric and gas operations. Sales of natural gas, electricity and refined petroleum products were the largest in the history of the company.

Pennsylvania Railroad.

New York, April 26 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. reported today March net operating income, before fixed charges and other income, of $6,847,453, compared with $3,750,493 in the same month a year ago. Motion Picture Common Stock Offered Today

350,000 Shares of Monogram Corporation Priced at $3.75.

Monogram Pictures Corporation, New York City, enters the market today with an issue of 350,000 shares of its $1 par value common stock to provide additional capital for expanding its operations. Public offering of the shares, priced at $3.75 per share, is being made by J. A. Sisto & Co.

The company was recently organized to continue on a larger scale the business of its predecessor corporation of the same name, which is widely known for its productions of lower-priced box office attractions having world-wide distribution.

The company proposes to establish its own distributing offices in New York City, Philadelphia and Washington. Distribution in the United Kingdom is handled by contract with Pathe Pictures, Ltd., London, who have already acquired the 1937-38 output of the company.

Authorized capitalization of the new company is 1,000,000 shares of common stock, $1 par value, of which 83,333 1-3 shares are outstanding. In addition to the 350,000 shares being presently offered the company has granted options on 500,000 shares on terms ranging from $4 per share if exercised on or before December 28, 1938, to $8 per share in 1942. The remaining 66,666 2-3 shares are reserved for issuance under certain conditions in liquidation of a five-year unsecured promissory note to Pathe International Corporation, due in 1942, for $200,000. The company has agreed to make immediate application to have its stock listed on the New York Curb Exchange.

Religious Faster Begs for Prayers

Stooping Oak, Tenn., April 26 (AP). Emaciated Jackson Whitlow, 45-year-old religious faster, appealed today to "everybody to pray for me that I may have the strength and grace to stand all that God wants me to go through with."

On the forty-eighth day he says he has gone without food since receiving "a call from the Lord." Whitlow was pitifully weak—unable to speak above a whisper and barely able to move about in his bed.

He is determined, he said, not to eat again "until the Lord reveals what he wants me to do."

War in House On Tidal Basin Site Continues

Scott's Two Measures Seek Authority for Congress; Competition Asked.

Legislative machinery to frustrate the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission kept grinding yesterday as two more measures were introduced to prevent the monument from being erected at the Tidal Basin.

Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat), California, was the author of both. Outspoken critic of the commission's plans, he placed in the hopper a resolution and a bill whose purpose is the same, namely, to prevent the memorial group, headed by Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), New York, from going forward with its program until Congress has approved the site, design and general plans.

Meanwhile, Representative Otha D. Wearin (Democrat), Iowa, announced that he will get up a discharge petition if the House Library Committee pigeonholes his resolution providing for an open architectural competition for the memorial design.

Another development yesterday in the memorial-cherry blossom fight was the action of the Federation of Women's Clubs in assailing the commission's selection of the Tidal Basin site and recommending that an auditorium be built as a memorial to the third President.

Court Building Involved.

On the House floor, Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, suggested that the Supreme Court be moved back into the Capitol and its present handsome building be converted into a Jefferson Memorial Museum.

The only tranquil note in another day filled with criticism of the Boylan group's activities came from the office of Representative Francis H. Case (Republican), of South Dakota. He issued the gentle reminder that even if the controversy should delay the memorial project indefinitely, the Nation will not want for a great monument to the statesman, what with his portrait in granite nearing completion at Mount Rushmore, in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Mount Rushmore is in Case's district.

Scott's two measures brought to four the total of bills or resolution which have been introduced in the last fortnight to forestall execution of the Boylan commission's plans.

Wearin's resolution is directed against the selection of John Russell Pope as architect without a competition. Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, last week offered a resolution forbidding use of the Tidal Basin area for a memorial to Jefferson.

Treadway Hearing Today.

The Library Committee, of which he is ranking minority member, will open hearings at 10 a. m. today on the Treadway measure. Hearings were opened last Friday on Wearin's resolution, only to be interrupted suddenly when Chairman Kent E. Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, ruled informally that the proposal was out of order since the architect's commission apparently had already been awarded to Pope.

With resumption of hearings on his measure in doubt, Wearin said yesterday that if the committee discards it he will seek to have the resolution brought up on the House floor by a discharge petition. That means he wil have to obtain 218 signatures—a majority of fellow members.

The Federation of Women's Clubs, representing 6,000 District residents, adopted a resolution protesting the Tidal Basin location because it would result in destruction of the Japanese cherry trees. "The secrecy which has surrounded the meetings of the monument commission" also was criticized.

The Boylan group was urged to abandon its approved site and "turn to the consideration of the erection of an auditorium which will be a perpetual joy and convenience to the public, this to be built on a suitable and conspicuous site, which will be a lasting memorial to a great and wise leader who cared above all things for the welfare of all the people."

Copies of the resolution will be sent to President Roosevelt, Representatives Boyland and Wearin, and Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

Choice of Place for Memorial Brought Quick Public Protest

Funds Originally Authorized Were Insufficient for Pope's Design, Submitted With Half of Commission Present.

By Gerald G. Gross

Scarcely had Chairman John J. Boylan announced on December 1, 1936, that the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission planned to build at the Tidal Basin than protests began to flow into newspapers and Congressmen's offices.

It was at this December meeting, attended by only six of the 12 members, that plans for the Pantheon-type memorial since approved by the commission were submitted for the first time. They were prepared by John Russell Pope, who was prevented by illness from attending the meeting.

Other members of Pope's architectural firm submitted the drawings. One set, entitled "Scheme A," depicted a circular structure with a columned portico adapted from the Roman Pantheon. The alternate plan, "Scheme B," presented a cruciform building inspired by the Villa Rotunda near Vicenza, Italy.

Execution of "Scheme A" would cost approximately $4,605,000, the commission was informed, while "Scheme B" would be about $60,000 cheaper. This covered the main superstructure of Georgia marble interior and exterior, foundations, statue, terraces, approaches, alteration of Tidal Basin, inscriptions and other expenses, including the architect's fees.

Appropriation Short.

When all this had been explained by Pope's agents, Stuart L. Gibboney, commission member, reminded his colleagues that Congress had authorized only $3,000,000 for the project. Representative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, another member, also expressed his concern over the financial angle.

In the ensuing discussion over costs, Chairman Boylan suggested the possibility of a WPA allotment to supplement the funds expected to be appropriated by Congress. He recalled that $7,000,000 had been allocated by the Federal Government for the proposed Louisiana Purchase Memorial in St. Louis.

"We got a WPA appropriation of $650,000 for my little museum in Philadelphia, which has nothing to do with the Federal Government," said Dr. Fiske Kimball. "If we cannot get $1,000,000 for this in Washington that is something to think about.

"In the case of the Lincoln Memorial there was nine appropriations during the course of the work, first, $2,000,000, and nine more making the total cost. If you get the shoveling of earth, filling and grading done by the WPA you would not have to go back to Congress.

"The entire Mall development between the Capitol and the White Lot have been done by the WPA."

Before the meeting broke up, the commissioners adopted a resolution drafted by Dr. Kimball which selected the Tidal Basin site, subject to approval of the President and ratification at the next meeting of the group.

Boylan had hoped to call his commission together again by mid-January but it was February 18 before the memorial builders were assembled in room 456 of the old House Office Building to cast the final and deciding ballots on the site, architect and design.

The chairman reported White House approval of the Pantheon design. Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, announced he would vote for the Tidal Basin site only because he believed the commission must present a united stand if its plans for a temple monument were to succeed.

So the "aye" vote was unanimous, as were the appointment of Pope as architect and the selection of this "Scheme A." After some little discussion, the commission voted favorably on designation of the National Park Service as its executive agent.

"Gentlemen, that practically concludes our work today," Boylan said after the echoes of the final "aye" had died. "I want to congratulate the commsision on the splendid unanimity of opinion that has been exemplified in the adoption of the resolutions and to say that we are really in a position now to go ahead and commence the erection of the memorial."

But the chairman did not reckon with the deluge of protests which were on the way against the chosen site, the cost and the selection of an architect without a competition. The only decision which has not been criticized to date is the commission's appointment of the National Park Service as its building agent.

Soviet Orders 17 Chinese to Leave Country

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 26.—Without explanation the Soviet police tonight ordered 17 Chinese, long resident in Moscow, to leave the Soviet Union at once.

The capital's Chinese colony of 500 was seriously alarmed by this move, and anxiety was shared by other foreign residents who believed it may foreshadow renewed pressure to expel all foreigners not employed under contracts or recognized representatives of foreign firms.

Pressure to reduce the foreign population is considered partly responsible for the fact about 400 American residents have left the country in the last 18 months.

The 17 Chinese appealed to their embassy for aid, but there was little hope the order would be rescinded.

Informed sources believed Japanese residents might receive similar orders, in view of recent official warnings to Soviet citizens to beware of foreigners, particularly in the Far East. Official press articles have accused the Japanese intelligence service there of widespread activity, in which Japanese, Chinese and white Russian agents were used.
